Oriental Art Classes Set by Recreation Dept.

Classes in stenciling and decoupage — the oriental decoration of boxes and chests — will begin 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Rutland Recreation Center.

Students will learn to work with stencils, arrangement of designs, lacquering, and finishing the project. Materials needed for the first lesson are pencils, tracing paper, a craft knife, and a pair of small-pointed, sharp scissors. Also needed, a small box, a bread board, a medium-sized picture frame with wide, flat surfaces, or an object of the student's choosing.

Golf Movie

A golf movie, featuring Gene Littler and Eric Brown, will be held Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Edwin W.

OBLIGATION

To the Editor: Upon hearing that serious consideration is being given to discontinue "The Barn" from the TV schedule, I have sent the following letter to the program director at WRGB-TV studios, Schenectady, N.Y. and urge all who agree, to make their views known in like manner:

"For many years I have directed and participated in, amateur variety performances throughout this general area, averaging eight to ten per year. I am also director of the talent competition, 'Talent Round-Up' sponsored annually by the City of Rutland Recreation Department. As a result of this experience, and my involvement with scores of young people, it has become increasingly obvious to me that programs such as 'The Barn' accomplish much more than, unfortunately, many realize. In providing a showcase for young talent it answers a profound and ever-increasing need, by offering recognition. And to young aspiring performers this can be the most promising reward of all. For many years WRGB has been nearly alone in offering this necessary encouragement, through its weekly presentation of 'The Barn.' In so doing it has received wide recognition by the public it has served — both performers and viewers alike. In view of this, it seems inconceivable that such a constructive, wholesome, and beneficial program would be even considered for cancellation.

"It is my firm conviction that instead of lessening our efforts in this area, we should be steadily increasing them. This provides a vital phase of recreation for both participant and spectator. The wholesome interests we arouse and encourage through the powerful influence of television, can be so instrumental in stimulating developing young minds to a healthy and satisfying heritage of responsibility and accomplishment.

"In conclusion, I feel that the television medium is entrusted with an uncompromising obligation to its viewing public. I grant that many times the fulfillment of this obligation creates difficult and complicated problems in programming, many of which we as laymen do not understand, realize, nor consider. However, it seems to me that one less soap opera, one less western, or one less aged movie would be a willing price to pay, in order that this clean, refreshing, change-of-pace family show might continue. I am certain that the former will be far less grieved than would be the demise of 'The Barn.' More so now than ever, it is a welcome respite in a continual procession of violence, moral decadence, and repetition. Its aims, ambitions, and results should be looked upon with pride, encouragement, and commendation.

"Thank you for your consideration of my views in this matter."

Wintry Days Have Their Ups and Downs at Country Club

Although the ski tow at Rutland Country Club was not in operation Friday, this sportsman was not to be denied lift services. Providing the tow here is Clovis Webster Jr., 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clovis Webster of Grove Street. The hardy skier is Tim Fitzsimmons, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fitzsimmons of 59 Baxter St.

Tobogganing Friday afternoon was fast on the slick layer of snow left by a Thursday night dusting which covered most of the state. It was often bumpy, as unexpectedly discovered here by two Rutland youngsters who became momenterly airborne while coasting at the Rutland Country Club. Up front is Henry Bride, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hayden Bride of 115 Maple St., while cousin, Sonny Bride, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Bride, 62 Williams St., rides aft.

Moore's and Mt. Holly Win in Adult Basketball

Cioffredi noted that the opening signal would be flashed at 8:30 p.m. at the Lawrence Recreation Center and wouldn't fade away until 11 p.m.

A women's activity night will begin Tuesday at the Recreation Center and will continue weekly as long as interest is shown, according to Department Supt. John W. Cioffredi.

Boys Club Expanded By City Recreation Dept

A boys club organized by an area scouting official last fall has been taken over by the Rutland Recreation Department on an official basis with activities planned for lads eight through 10 years old.

Thomas E. Barrett Jr., scout committeeman at Immaculate Heart of Mary School, organized the club at the parochial school last September. Barrett arranged activities for the boys which included games, sports, and crafts.

Recreation Department Supt. John W. Cioffredi said he recently met with Barrett and drew up plans for organization of the Rutland Recreation Boys Club. According to Cioffredi, the program would offer a greater variation of activities for city boys from 8 to 10 years old.

Cioffredi also glanced at his calendar and confirmed that the new teen step to be introduced would definitely be "The X-Plus-5," a commemorative step with a heated tempo.

Discouraging, Disparaging Are Teens' Comments Friday

"You've picked the wrong night to come for a story," the Recreation Department official said Friday night.

He was speaking to a reporter who arrived at the Lawrence Recreation Center with a camera to get a story and some pictures.

But one glance at the empty floor of the center's dance hall was enough to show that no pictures would be taken.

A story, however was there.

The Recreation Department dances were once crowded affairs, as youths streamed toward the center like lemmings toward the sea. The twanging of guitars would echo through Nickwackett Street each Friday evening and the dance floor was so crowded that fancy steps like "The Bat - Wing Flutter Strutter" could scarcely be performed.

But competition looms to the east of Rutland.

A tavern owner near the Killington ski area watched profits melting with the snow a few weeks back and decided that drastic steps were necessary to bring that ringing sound back to his cash register.

The solution? Stock in some soft drinks, put the bar off limits, import a rock 'n' roll band, call the whole thing "atmosphere," and holler for the teenagers.

You couldn't hold them back with all the recreation centers in the world. Friday evening saw most of Rutland's teenagers up on the mountain, and those few who weren't there wished they were.

A disconsolate few stood on the steps of the Recreation Center with their hands in their pockets and shuffled their sneakered feet as they spoke.

"This dumb place doesn't have anything," moaned a 15-year-old girl, cynical beyond her years. "Everybody - everybody - is up on the mountain tonight."

Asked why the mountain was so popular, she replied that it had that elusive quality, "atmosphere."

"Atmosphere" in this case was a loud juke box and old cable reels tipped on their sides to serve as tables. "Atmosphere" was also a $1 cover charge and 25-cent soft drinks, but the prices didn't bother the teens.

And although the mountain spot is run strictly on a commercial basis, the teens thought that controls on them were looser there.

"Why, down here, they wanted us girls to wear skirts and told the boys not to wear dungarees." The rule was later rescinded, but the stigma evidently lingers on.

"They ought to have a place where the teens can run the show," a 16-year-old boy chimed in. He was reminded that Teen Town was just such a place and folded anyway because of teenage apathy.

He shrugged his shoulders, turned toward the dance hall window, and said, "The band isn't too hot."

To the adult ear, the three guitars, one saxophone, and one set of drums sounded as hot as anything called a band these days, but the boy's comrades nodded in solemn agreement and invoked the names of groups from as far away as Burlington as examples of the sort of band that the Recreation Department could import.

Asked if much of the resistance to the dances wasn't just general teenage dissatisfaction with anything more than three weeks old, the teens replied that they didn't think so.

"We'd come here if they had some atmosphere," a girl said with a sincere tone, but defining what sort of atmosphere would draw a crowd was beyond her capability.

The question was put to the 15-year-old cynic.

"What would you do with this place?"

"I'd close it."

Another youth came out on the porch and announced that he was heading for the mountain.

Sneakered feet jumped from the floor and squealing voices were heard to ask for a ride "up there."

"I'll be right back," he said. "I'm just going to check the dairy bar for girls, and then I'll pick you up."

"Promise?" they asked.

"Promise," he shouted, as he dashed away.

Inside, the band wailed through something called "Walking My Cat Named Dog" while two lone couples gyrated about, chewing gum nonchalantly.

"Well," sighed the department official, "what are you going to do?"

No one told him what the 15-year-old girl had suggested.

Push Over

School may be out all this week, but things will be hopping at the Rutland Recreation Center all week long.

And to make sure they don't hop in too crowded a fashion, John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of city recreation and parks, announced Sunday that while everyone will be welcome at the center, there will be a schedule in effect.

Grade school children may use the center in the morning, Cioffredi said, and high school and junior high school students may use it in the afternoon.

"This arrangement will enable us to keep ahead of the crowd," Cioffredi said.

A Switch

The Lawrence Recreation Center will host city elections instead of a Boys Club meeting early Tuesday evening, but the activities for the Women's Physical Fitness program will go on as planned at 8 p.m. Golf lessons are also set for 7:30 p.m.

A Recreation Department official also announced Monday that stenciling and decoupage classes at the center would resume Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Restaurant, Westside, Moores Win

Rutland Restaurant, West Rutland and Moores advanced in the Rutland Adult League single elimination basketball tournament Monday night as Smith Buick, CVPS and McIntyre fell by the wayside.

The second round of action comes up Wednesday night with the Aces meeting Carris Reels at 6:30, Mount Holly playing Rutland Restaurant at 7:45 and Ray Reilly taking on West Rutland at 9.

Rutland Restaurant, with four cagers in double figures, clubbed Smith Buick, 82-68. Hank Puding led the winners with 19 points while Roy Fredericks scored 29 for Smith Buick.

Bill Benham popped in 15 tallies to lead West Rutland to a 49-41 decision over CVPS in the second game of the night. Phil Carroll and Jack Flood each scored 11 for the losers.

John Gecha, with nine of his 17 points coming in the final quarter, led Moores as the victors outscored McIntyre, 18-17, in the fourth period for a 45-42 winner. Stu St. Peter topped McIntyre with 14 counters.

Bicycle Registry Set By Police Department

Rutland police, stressing play-time safety for area youngsters, will inspect and register bicycles in late March and early April at the Rutland Recreation Center.

Bicycles must be equipped with properly operating brakes, a front light capable of emitting a beam to be recognized from 500 feet, a rear reflector, and a horn or bell.

Registration dates are the last two Saturdays in March, and the first two Saturdays in April. Hours at the bicycle registry are from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Police said bicycles found in violation of city ordinances after April 15 will be impounded by patrolmen. Other punishments will include fines of not more than $5.

Patrolman Russell Randlett, head of the Rutland bicycle safety program, reported that the bicycle traffic court will also be in action this year.

VANDALS STRIKE AGAIN AT CITY SKI SITE

Once again, John William Cioffredi, superintendent of the Rutland Recreation Department, has stepped from his office to announce that the new teen step to be introduced at this week's dance is "The Greystoke," an atavistic dance with overtones of nobility.

Cioffredi added that the dance will run from 8:30 to 11 p.m. at the Recreation Center Saturday. Admission is by card, and Ralph Smith will be the man behind the records.

Square Dance Program Is Swinging, Repeat Set

The Rutland Square Dance Club will attempt to top the record crowd at last weekend's dance when they hold another square dance Saturday at the Rutland Armory.

Caller Frannie Hintz of Monson, Mass., will direct the dancing this week. Last weekend, 56 couples twirled to the calling of Red Pierce of Hampden, Mass.

The dance program, sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department, will graduate its fall class Thursday. Instructors are Mr. and Mrs. Neil Bardon.

Full Round of Action At Recreation Center

A Saturday schedule of indoor and outdoor activities, sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department, should keep local youngsters occupied, according to John W. Cioffredi, superintendent.

Planned for the morning is Grades 5 and 6 basketball league play at 9:30. In the afternoon, high school boys' basketball will be played. The ski tow and skating rinks will be open all day Saturday and also Sunday. Rutland's '65 City Report Details a Year's History

As Usual, It's Excellently Put Together and Interesting to Read.

Rutland's 73rd annual city report arrived from the printers Tuesday, and city hall habitués snapped up copies as quickly as City Clerk Henry P. Battles could put them on his counter. The 101-page booklet had between its covers a welter of figures, reports, and other data which tells the story of Rutland's municipal government from July, 1964, to June, 1965.

It details Rutland's spending from the $1.4 million spent on city schools to the new $180.25 typewriter for the fire department. It lists the city population (as of the 1960 census) at 18,325, and remarks that, of that number, 799 were new births. Deaths, as reported by the city clerk, numbered 409, while 148 couples registered for marriage.

Some new names made the report, among them Bat Man, television star extraordinary and central figure of the Recreation Department's Halloween parade, Dr. William Atkins, the city's new superintendent of schools, was officially welcomed.

Howard W. Sherman's name appeared under the report of the Director of Civil Defense, replacing the late Butler L. Ward, and an annual report from the Urban Renewal Agency was gone, a casualty of Rutland voters.

A few things didn't change from last year's report. Fire Chief Alfred H. Koltonski made his annual earnest plea for a

"We're off, Kite-man!" they cried, and they were, for the Rutland Recreation Department sponsored a windy kite contest

Saturday for city youngsters, who seemed to enjoy the proceeding immensely.

Happiness Is Some Tissue Paper and a Ball of String

The location may have been Whits playground, but the skies overhead Saturday were black—with kites.

It was the First Annual Layman and the Professional Conclave of the Rutland Kite Flyers' Benevolent Association, sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department Saturday morning.

And if you were a kid with a kite and looked forward to the day with anticipation (or if you were the parent of a kid with a kite and looked forward to the day with dread), you were not disappointed.

There were lots of contests, and lots of winners, but for many, the greatest reward was the brisk wind which whipped across White Playground.

"I've been trying for twenty years," one excited parent beamed, "and I never got a kite up before today." In mute satisfaction, he pointed proudly to a scarlet diamond floating in the breeze as a mute testimony to his skills.

And whether it was in the 40 yard dash (get your kite in the air and run like mad, then reel it down), the altitude contest (highest kite at the end of two minutes), or the kite battle (tangle strings and the last kite aloft wins), the youthful kites were eager competitors.

Surprisingly, the actual damage done in the battle was minimal. But at least one kite was left dangling from a power line and one reel of string was hoisted gracefully into the blue from the hands of its youthful owner.

But as the last kite was reeled in, and the last of the estimated 75 kids who struggled to get their kites up struggled to get them down, the feelings were mostly happy ones.

Recreation Department worker William Reardon Jr. who directed the activities, and Recreation Superintendent John W. Cioffredi, who oversaw them, planned for next year's kite contest.

Winners were Mindy Cotrupi, 8, midget 40 yard dash; Denise Reardon, 5, midget altitude; Mary Pokrywka, 10, intermediate girls' 40 yard dash; John Edwards, 10, intermediate boys' 40 yard dash; Deana Fagan, 10, intermediate girls' altitude; John Edwards, intermediate boys' altitude and Jim Prati, 13, junior boys' 40 yard dash and altitude.

The most original kite award was won by Deana Fagan, for an imported Japanese kite in the shape of a bat.

Prizes will be awarded at the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center Monday.

Kite Flying

Flying kites is an old sport, but a never ending source of enjoyment. Saturday's contests at White Playground were a good illustration.

When kite flying first started nobody knows. It was very ancient before Benjamin Franklin thought about its pulling power, and decided to demonstrate it.

He stripped on one side of Fresh Pond in Cambridge, Mass., and persuaded a friend to take his clothes to the other side. He put up his kite in a steady breeze, and had it tow him across the pond. It worked.

Later he made his famous experiment by means of a kite to demonstrate the relation of lightning to other forms of electricity.

The science of aerodynamics involved in the modern era of aviation and astronautics would amaze Ben Franklin, but maybe not surprise him.

Kite flying, for most of us, is a sport of youth. It brings a tussle between personal skill and relatively unpredictable forces of nature. It teaches. And it's fun.

1,200 Eggs!

Easter eggs — 1,200 of them! That's the number of eggs John William Cioffredi and his helpers have promised to hide in Main Street Park for the Rutland Recreation Department's Easter Egg Hunt on Saturday, April 5.

And among the eggs will be special ones painted gold and silver, and worthy of a reward for those who find them. Prizes will also be given to those children in each of three age groups who find the most eggs.

"You can keep all the eggs you find," Cioffredi said with a twitch of his ears, "but you have to bring your own basket."

Cioffredi also said that he was looking for volunteer help from teenagers for the project.

"We may have an Easter Bunny or two on hand to help the kids," he said, "and I also know that I can't wrap 1,200 Easter Eggs by myself."

Recreation Activity Is Set

With spring a week and a day old on the calendar, Rutland Recreation Superintendent John W. Cioffredi came bouncing happily into The Herald offices to announce his department's calendar of springtime programs.

Registration for the following activities will be held at the Recreation Center next week:

Monday — Softball for boys in Grades 3 and 4, 3:30 p. m.

Tuesday — Outdoor activities (track, relay races, horse-shoes) for girls in Grades 4, 5 and 6, 3:30 p. m.

Wednesday — Outdoor activities for boys and girls in Grades 5 and 6, 3:30 p. m.

Thursday — Softball league for boys in Grades 7 and 8.

Friday — Daisy Mae League for high school girls and outdoor activities for girls in Grades 7 and 8. Daisy Mae League registration will be held at Meadow Street playground at 2:30 p. m.

Bicyclist Must Register For New Licenses Here

City cyclists have only two more Saturdays to register their bicycles, but 2,000 have either given up the recreation or are waiting until the last minute.

Patrolman Russell Randlett, head of the Rutland Police Department bicycle patrol program, said that only 200 bicycles had been registered so far this year.

The police have started a new policy of registration this year so that all bicycles will be properly equipped before they are used on city streets.

According to Randlett, city youngsters have to bring their bicycles to the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center Saturday April 2 or April 9 for inspection.

RECREATION ACTIVITY

To the Editor: I see by today's paper, with spring two weeks old, the recreation activity has, again, omitted the 1st and 2nd grade children. This would be the 6 to 8 year olds. These children are never included in the recreation department activities (except swimming lessons). I would like to know why. Surely it can't be a matter of controlling this age group as they would be more easily organized than older grade school children.

I would not feel that this is a poor condition if the school program for physical education were more reasonable. But, the physical education program at the grade school my 1st and 2nd graders attend amounts to a total of one half hour a week. Surely this needs

Meeting Set

April 6

The Vermont Amateur Softball Association will hold its annual spring meeting Sunday afternoon April 17 at 2 p.m. at the Community Recreation Center.

The meeting has been called by State Association Commissioner Arthur Mero-la of Burlington and National Commissioner of White River Junction.

All teams of leagues interested in competing during the coming season in the Vermont Association should have representatives at this meeting as rules applying to players and teams will again be outlined.

Later in the season, following the registration of teams into the Association and the application of teams along these registrants for tournament competition, the district and state tournaments will be set up by the association officials.

The most important order of business at the April 17 meeting will be the clarification of present and introduction of new rules, which will apply during the coming season.

Vermont will again have two divisions of competition leading to the district and finally to the state finals. One will be the "B" division or slow-pitch classification and the other the "A" classification or fast-pitch division. These divisions will also be explained at Sunday's meeting.

Curtains Up!

Jug bands, barnyard impersonation acts, tap dancers, and comedians will be among those competing for a chance at stardom at the second annual Rutland Talent Scouts program on April 23.

According to John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation Department, which will sponsor the show, 35 acts will audition on Wednesday, Thursday, and Monday nights for spots in the show.

The best act in the show will win an all-expense paid trip to New York City to the auditions for a nationally televised talent show. A talent scout from the television show will be in the audience on April 23.

Members of the talent show committee are Robert Laird, Miss Karen Sankorn, George DuBray, Mrs. Elizabeth W. Slayton, and Joseph Moscatello.

Cioffredi said that the committee needs volunteers to work on lighting, costumes, scenery, and stage management.

Vandals Hit Golf Club

Go on Rampage Through Building; Damage Total Still Unknown.

Vandals ransacked the Rutland Country Club early Thursday, tearing the felt tops of pool tables, cutting the stuffing from overstuffed chairs, smashing bottles, and tearing lockers open.

Rutland police described the damage as extensive but an exact estimate of damage was not available Thursday night.

Police Chief Stuart Jenne said the vandals entered the club after breaking glass in a storm door on the south side of the building.

Club officials discovered that the only item taken from the building was a commemorative one dollar bill, which was framed and hanging from a wall.

Inscribed on the bill were the signatures of three club members, Dr. William W. Brislin, Philip Weiss and James Hough.

Vandals harassed Recreation Department ski tow equipment all winter at the country club.

Many Saturday ski sessions were cancelled by department officials when they discovered a sliced rope tow.

Vandals have also been busy recently at Castleton State College, which hired a detective to help keep down destruction there.

White Playground Apparently Named Site of Proposed Second City Pool

But Project Still Faces Its Biggest Hurdle—Construction Costs.

By PAT SLATTERY

While most city residents are still keeping their snow shovels handy and insuring that fuel supplies are adequate for the last six weeks of winter, a group of interested citizens are worried about a second swimming pool to cool off Rutland youngsters for future summers.

The group, the Rutland Chamber of Commerce swimming pool committee, will meet Tuesday to go over the plans and costs of a proposed new municipal swimming pool.

Headed by Dr. Donald Iken, the committee has met three times since last August, when they traveled to Fort Edward, N. Y., to inspect a type of swimming pool used by that community, and discussed the new pool.

They have inspected various sites within the city where a new swimming pool could be located but have apparently settled on White Playground, located in the southeast section of Rutland near Avenue B.

The highlight of the meeting, to start at noon in the Chamber's conference rooms, will be when a Burlington architect, Robert Stanley, unveils the plans he has drawn up for the proposed pool.

The committee, made up of local civic officials and businessmen, was organized last summer after city parents raised their annual cry that the present swimming pool, located on North Main Street, was inadequate.

The present structure, built in 1929, is not centrally located and is not large enough to handle all city youngsters who want to use the facility.

Many people feel that the city should build another pool and also continue to use the present structure.

Since August, the group has looked at proposed sites on Forest Street, Coolidge Avenue, South Main Street, Park Street and the White Playground.

The White Playground site offered many advantages over the other sites because the land is city owned and the location is good.

The only disadvantage is that site is that it might prove expensive to develop the land, mostly marshland.

Although many area politicians have for years promised the southwest section of the city a new swimming pool, the area has apparently been skipped over again.

The site on Forest Street, near Plain Street, also had many advantages, but the availability of the land is uncertain.

The other sites were dropped because of heavy traffic, privately owned land, and distance from city children.

The biggest obstacle facing the group is the cost of the project—estimated between $80,000 and $100,000. Half of the amount needed could be paid for by federal funds and the other half would have to come from private organizations or a bond issue.

Stanley, who represents a Burlington swimming pool firm which specializes in community size pools, will tell the group how much a new pool will cost the city Tuesday.

John Clifford, superintendent of the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department and a member of the committee, said Thursday that he is not sure if federal funds are available.

"We are thinking of asking the government for $50,000 in matching funds for the project, and if Stanley's estimated costs are lower we will ask for less," he added.

Once the committee completes their plans and estimated cost of the pool, Mayor Harold J. Nichols and the Board of Aldermen will have to decide whether it should be built and how it should be paid for.

White's Hoops Give East Victory In Adult Loop All-Star Contest

Two quick hoops by Dave White in the last five seconds of play, gave the East All-Stars a narrow 67-66 win Sunday over the West Stars in the Adult Basketball League's gala tilt at the Lawrence gym.

It was the initial victory for the East in the annual affair. The West had won the two previous games.

Charlie Patch of the Professors, a member of the West squad, was voted the game's Most Valuable Player award after controlling the rebound action on both boards.

White finished with 12 points and was second high for the victors as Fran Graham of Moores pumped in 13. White plays with the Aces.

Hank Smith of Rutland Restaurant was third high with 10 tallies.

Stu St. Peter of McIntyre led the West with 15 counters which was also high for the game. Mike Barslow of Fair Haven got 15 markers.

A total of 50 fouls were called in the contest with the East converting 17 of 30 tries from the line and the West swishing 22 of 40 flips.

St. Peter buzzed the nets for eight points in the first period to give the West an 18-14 lead at quartertime, which stood up at 37-33 at the half.

The East, with six men in the scoring column, then put on a 19-14 party in the third period, with Ray Libuda's jumper at the buzzer giving them a 52-51 edge.

The tally then jockeyed back and fourth until White took personal care of it at the end of the game.

Alvarado!

Cioffredi also said that the new teen set to be introduced this week is "The Alvarado," a slowly paced dance with a Latin beat, believed to have originated in Detroit.

Swimming Pool Chances Good

Committee Voices Optimism; Federal Funds, Bond Voting Ahead.

By ED STEVENS

Rutland's Chamber of Commerce pool committee, waist-deep in a number of problems, is still wading optimistically towards what they hope will be a mid-summer completion date for the proposed municipal swimming hole.

Optimistic predictions were voiced Thursday by the committee. Made up of a number of area businessmen and professional people, they are looking forward to foundation-laying operations by late spring, although definite plans or a cost estimate for the pool have not as yet been set.

Barriers standing in the way of the pool completion were the receipt of acceptable plans and bids, passage of a bond issue, and an anticipated federal aid appropriation to match the city's share of the cost.

Any bond issue would be voted on in a special election in May.

Although a definite site hasn't been chosen yet, White Playground will probably get the nod.

The committee reported that things were rolling well, until the group, headed by Dr. Donald Icken, met recently. A Burlington contractor - architect who was supposed to have drawn up plans for the pool failed to show up at the meeting.

The architect, Robert Stanley, had been originally contacted by the committee after the group took the first steps toward the swimming facility last August. During that month, Icken and several other Rutlanders visited the municipal pool at Fort Edward, N.Y.

The committee, unable to contact Stanley recently, is unsure why the contractor failed to show at the meeting.

"He seemed sincere and conscientious, but he left us high and dry," Dr. Icken said. The committee head said that they were still holding the door open for further negotiations with Stanley. "But from now on we're not going to keep all our eggs in one basket. We're going to do some more looking around," Icken said.

He pointed out that the group had hoped to award the contract to a Vermont firm.

Stanley, regarded by the pool group as an established and reputable pool builder, has been involved in the construction of a number of motel and community pools around the state. Icken said that the committee would consider awarding the contract to a local contractor. But, he said, construction of pools was a very specialized field.

"There are many factors to consider such as soil, frost, temperatures and such. We would have to first know that the local company would be qualified," Icken said.

Bernard L. Roach, director of the Chamber of Commerce, said that two out-of-state firms had already been contacted. The firms are the Paddock Construction Co. of Albany, N.Y., and Splash Inc. of Springfield, Mass.

"We've already negotiated with both companies and we told them to sharpen their pencils to a fine point because we want an honest bid," Roach said.

Roach said that the committee was depending on receiving bids from the companies and added that he and other members of the group had been in constant contact with the contractors.

He said bids on three sizes of pools — maximum, medium, and minimum — had been requested from each firm.

"We would like the maximum size pool," Roach said, but added that the dimensions of the facility would be determined by availability of funds for the project.

The committee contends that the present structure, constructed in 1929, is neither centrally located nor large enough to accommodate all the city youngsters who wish to use the facility.

Since August, the group has studied sites on Forest Street, South Main Street, Park Street, Coolidge Avenue, and at the White Playground.

The White Playground site, committee officials say, offers many advantages over other areas. The property is city owned and the location is easily accessible to the rapidly developing south and southeast sections of the city.

The only disadvantage con-

Swimming

fronting the committee's plans is that the area might prove expensive to develop.

Icken said that a report to the federal government, required before Federal aid could be appropriated for municipal recreation projects, was recently made.

The report asks for estimates on costs for the project and proposed dimensions for the pool.

Icken said that the committee estimated that the pool would cost $100,000.

"With this figure, we think that we have a good rough estimate, leaving leeway for changes," Dr. Icken said.

Dr. Icken said that the committee was in hopes that the cost could be reduced. He gave $70,000 to $80,000 as a possible construction figure.

"We're hoping that many of the additional facilities such as bath houses, fountains, and other accessories could be furnished by local civic groups," Dr. Icken noted.

The chairman said that the Rotary Club had already proposed to match funds with the city to rebuild the tennis courts at Rotary Field. He said that additional club funds could be available to the pool committee.

The committee has already drawn plans stating the dimensions of the pool.

The plans say that the desired pool would be 75 feet wide and 150 feet in length. The over-all depth would be from four to five feet.

A protruding area would be used for diving purposes. The plans call for the diving area to be 30 feet by 30 feet.

Dr. Icken said the diving area would be roped off from the regular rectangular pattern of the pool. This was Icken said, the divers would not be interfering with regular swimming activities.

The committee head said that the plan was only one of many possible alternatives. He said that this type of pool was popular in many other community recreation programs and seems proper for Rutlanders.

"Of course, the actual pool is going to be determined by the cost and the availability of federal funds," he said.

Icken said that the committee wanted to keep any bond issue beneath the $50,000 mark. He added, "I think there is a reasonable chance that the bond may be only from $30,000 to $40,000. But, he said, the actual figure depends on many factors.

Dr. Icken said that the bond, if approved by the aldermen, could go before the voters in the upcoming special May election.

As for chances of passage of the bond, the committee head said, "the committee feels that the community would be prepared to vote favorably if the government agrees to match funds."

But Icken and other committee members looked beyond the many "ifs" to admit that "we still have a long way to go and a lot of fast hard work to do

There Are Those in Rutland Who 'Knew Batman When'

By TOM (JOKER) SLAYTON
Big-time Batmadness has hit Rutland, but it hasn't scored a total victory yet.

The TV-based Batman surge is somewhat slow in getting off the ground in Rutland, where Batman has been a familiar figure for several years as the leader of Rutland's traditional Halloween Parade.

If a lot of Rutland youngsters are enthralled by the new craze there are still a few fans of the old-style (pre-TV) Batman, who view the new wave of products as little more than crass Bat-junk, and who have grave reservations about the Goth a M Gladiator's TV performances.

One of Recreation Superintendent John W. Cioffredi's children reportedly remarked one Wednesday night at Batman time:

"I know Batman... he was in the parade."

But, to the true Batmanophiles, the Caped Crime Crusher hasn't been the same since he changed Batmobiles and got a revamped trademark a few years ago.

The television show — and particularly the gadgets engendered by it — have earned the wrath of those who knew Batman when.

And there are apparently, quite a few who did.

Even before his television premier, the Daring Duo (Batman and Boy Wonder Robin) had a host of admiring fans. Some of these fans published a semi-scholarly little magazine called "Batmania" and devoted to a serious study of their hero — his comic book history and the complicated paths of his arduous adventures and many colorful enemies.

The magazine now has a circulation of more than 1,000 and subscribers in many foreign lands.

Marginal differences meant everything to this devoted band of followers, and changes in Batman's costume or equipment seemed like the brash usurping of tradition.

Before television's onslaught, the worst attack on tradition had been the placing of a little yellow oval behind the black bat symbol which fluttered on Batman's chest. (Sharp-eyed parade goers will note that Rutland's Batman has no such unauthentic addition to the emblem in his Halloween peregrinations).

But when Batman became television's answer to high camp and started making all that money, it seemed to the faithful as though a little bit of his soul was lost.

The show itself, while it did give the Booted Bat a where, chance to shine on TV as his arch-rival Superman had never done, incensed many long-time fans because it satirized the arch hero.

And if the television appearances of Batman tended to treat the Caped Crusher's image with disrespect, the gadgets which began to appear in downtown stores were seen as downright inaccurate.

The detail-consciousness of the Batfans was aroused to indignation when such items as Batman-launchers began to appear.

"See him really fly" the launchers proclaimed.

And the fans replied, their ire aroused:

"He doesn't really fly. He swings on a silken cord."

"They're just trying to hop on the band wagon," said one fan concerning the many plastic, tinsel, and cardboard Bat-labeled products.

Other products invoking the wrath of the old-time fans are Batguns (which the fair-dealing Batman would never have used) Batkites ("See Him Fly") and "charter" membership buttons in "The original Batman Club."

The membership buttons are particularly infuriating to Batman's long-time fans.

One put it this way:

"Those pins say 'Charter membership' and they were made in 1966. Batman — and a lot of fans — have been around since 1939, when the strip was first drawn by Bob Kane, so there's something wrong somewhere."

Palms Outlasts Mt. Holly To Cop Adult Tourney

Howard Dewey dumped in 33 points and led Palms to a 77-70 victory over Mt. Holly in the championship round of the Adult Recreation League's single elimination tournament.

Dewey tossed in seven hoops in the first period, but it wasn't enough as Mt. Holly came out of the session with a 22-21 lead.

The ex-Castleton scoring ace then slowed down to eight points over the next two periods before tanking 11 in the final stanza to keep Palms on top in the closing session.

The winners held just a 37-36 edge after the first half, but pulled off a 22-17 edge in the third reel as five players got into the scoring act.

Jim Browne was second high for Palms with 16 pointers. Tom Perrino had 28 for Mt. Holly while Jerry Toomey got 17.

Smith Buick beat the Miracle Workers, 50-38, in a preliminary game as Gary Swanson poured in 17 points and Don Colburn got 13. Hank Poplaski got 15 for the losers while Bill Reardon whipped in 13.

NO BULL
To the Editor: In regard to the Rutland school board wanting to make a survey of the Rutland Fairgrounds at a cost to the taxpayers of $750.00 to $1,000.00 when the taxpayers have to pay approximately $2,000.00 for a special election, each year, to get enough money to maintain the schools in their present form.

If Dana School is as badly in need of additional room, as it probably is, why not spend the money there. Believe me, there is as much chance of their taking over any part of the Fairgrounds as you are of seeing the entire school board driving a herd of purple cows down Main Street to the music of thousands of white black birds in the trees of Main Street park, and this is no bull.

Board Postpones Debate On Union High School

Matter Put Off Until March 28; Members Urged to Study It.

The Rutland School Board postponed any decision on the proposed Union High School during its short but lively meeting Tuesday evening.

The board unanimously elected Charles Shortle as its president and hassled over the prospect of using the Rutland Fairgrounds as a Municipal athletic field.

A special meeting March 28 will decide whether Rutland will join 13 other area towns to pursue a Rutland area union high school. The board's vote then will also probably decide the fate of the entire project.

Rutland would provide the site, almost half the pupils, and a large share of the money for the proposed $7 million facility, and many area educators feel that a veto on Rutland's part would kill the entire project.

Shortle gave each member a printed report on the union school and told them to "study it well" before the March 28 meeting. The board's decision will be put into a letter of intent to the union high school study group.

The chief of the study group is also the newly elected clerk of the school board, Patrick Mangano.

The athletic committee reported that it wanted to go ahead with a survey of the feasibility of using the fairgrounds as a municipal athletic field and touched off a lively discussion on the subject.

CHARLES SHORTLE

Albert Davis explained the committee's recommendations action to the board after noting that Board of Aldermen had washed its hands of the affair.

Davis said that his committee wanted to go ahead with the survey — with or without aldermanic support — since the proposal to use the fairgrounds would benefit Rutland school children.

Dr. J. Carleton Stickney rose to point out that fair officials, and the Rutland County Agricultural Society, owners of the property, have been uncooperative in the past.

When the suggestion was made that any action be postponed until the union school issue was made clear, Dr. William Atkins, superintendent of complicated and told the board that the clay soil within the track oval wasn't very good for football and $100,000 would have to be spent on land fill.

Douglas's remarks touched off another round of debate among the board members, but Davis held sway in the end.

Robert C. Kinney evidently changed his mind between the time he voted and the time debate resumed, for he asked, if the whole matter was anything the school board should be pursuing.

"Let's turn it back to the aldermen," Kinney said.

"They won't take it," said Davis. "Let's go ahead and gamble $750 or $1,000 on a survey and see what happens."

The earlier vote stood, and Davis said that he would ask for an appropriation at the next school board meeting.

The board also hired three new teachers and a guidance counselor, but not until some debate on procedural questions took place.

Edward McCormack, Mrs. Betty McCormack, and Mrs. Marlene Brown are the new teachers, and Charles Mitchell is the new guidance counselor.

The recommendations were made by Carris and the Teachers Committee, and Davis called for a vote on the new teachers.

Carris maintained that the Teachers Committee had the right to hire teachers without board approval, but Davis countered that the latest thinking along those lines held that the entire board must approve the recommendations.

The Teachers Committee has often contracted with teachers during the summer months, when the regular board does not meet.

The matter was referred to

MUSCLES AND LEARNING

To the Editor: I read with interest about the school commissions' willingness to spend between $750 and $1,000 to have a survey made of the Fairgrounds oval for the purpose of having a municipal athletic field.

Albert Davis said, and I quote from your Rutland Herald of March 16th, "that a survey be made with an eye to showing the public just what can be done with the Fairgrounds and letting public opinion force fair officials to bend from their present stance" end of quote. I maintain Mr. Davis should look at the overcrowded Dana School, the wanted addition to the Northeast School, and have the public opinion on whether school conditions should be bettered or spend money, not yet available, for a survey of a much discussed athletic field. Mr. Davis, to my way of thinking, is worried too much about the building up of the muscles and not worried enough about the learning of the Rutland school children.

John William Cioffredi, Recreation Department superintendent, gazes out over White Playground, site of a proposed second swimming pool. But funding problems beset the backers.

City's Second Pool Depends as Much On State Funds as on Voter Approval

And State Officials Say That Many Communities Are Waiting for Cash.

Friday afternoon, John Cioffredi walked the soggy outfield of a White Street Playground baseball diamond. A number of well-intentioned optimists foresee a modern pool on the site by August.

"Real nice spot for a pool," Cioffredi said. "Solid ground, centrally located. A real nice spot for a new pool."

According to the Chamber of Commerce pool committee, headed by Rutland Veterinarian Donald Icken, the playground plot is the best site for the proposed $100,000 pool. The committee and a number of area parents claim that the present pool is outdated and that a supplementary pool is needed to accommodate all the youngsters who wish to use the city's bathing facilities.

Chamber of Commerce Director Bernard L. Roach said several weeks ago that pool construction could begin by late spring.

At that time, the pool committee was awaiting bids and sketches from two out of state construction firms.

"We're expecting estimates and sketches on three different sized pools anytime now," Roach said several weeks ago.

"We still waiting," Roach said Friday as the information from the two firms — Splash

Inc. of Springfield, Mass., and the Paddock Construction Co. of Albany, N.Y. — still had not arrived.

The pool committee was earlier "let down" when a Burlington contractor failed to show at a chamber meeting in February. The contractor was also supposed to have provided plans and estimates for the pool committee.

If the plans arrive in time, the committee hopes to bring the pool plan before the board of aldermen for approval of a special bond issue which would be hurried before the voters in May.

Roach, who feels the public will support the issue, said the bond would be for half of the proposed cost of the pool.

The pool committee is in high hopes that the other half of the funds will be provided by state aid.

According to a 25-year federal aid plan which began in 1964 the federal government has allotted states funds for recreational dispensation.

The state has made 12 per cent of the federal grant available to community recreation projects during 1966 and 1967. Of the $120,000 which was made available to Vermont towns and cities, only $80,000 remains.

The requests, made to the state recreation department, must be accompanied by a set of plans for the proposed project in addition to a cost estimate. The pool committee, desperately attempting to keep their hopes for the pool afloat, faced their first major crisis several weeks ago.

The committee was then standing high and dry without the needed set of plans and immediately demanded if Rutland was to have any chance of getting its pool this year.

The committee drew up their own set of plans, basing their ideas on the already existing Brattleboro bathing facility — a common variation of the community pool. They estimated cost $100,000.

The Rutland pool request now rests in the hands of State Recreation Director Howard Jeffrey, along with at least a half dozen requests from other Vermont towns.

"Rutland really ought to have another pool," Jeffrey noted, but added, "There are a number of other smaller towns which have hopes of purchasing beachfronts which are in danger of being bought up by commercial or industrial interests."

Jeffrey said that the decision on who would get the money depended on which request was the most pressing.

He said that construction projects such as the Rutland pool may have to be delayed in favor of natural resource purchase.

THE UNAPPRECIATED

To the Editor: In response to a letter which was recently published on the editorial page of The Herald I feel it is time someone defended the "unappreciative" youth of Rutland. There also appeared an article in a previous edition which said about the same thing. Both of the writers spoke of atmosphere as being phoney. Is it our fault if we find more enjoyment in a place "up on the mountain" than we do here in Rutland? Even if it is our fault, who is to say what is right as far as taste is concerned? The first mistake the dear lady committed was that of speaking of Sugarshack and Hampton Manor in the same breath. The young people of Rutland do not go to Killington to drink, not when they can do it here in the city. Let's not kid ourselves, it is quite well known that alcoholic beverages may be obtained by anyone at any time. (This includes adults.)

Since the city of Rutland provides teenagers with a place to enjoy themselves, we are obliged to do so. The city of Rutland also provides polling places, but how many of the eligible voters actually participated in the last election? Irrelevant? Maybe. The Recreation Center has been the main issue. Let's take a closer look. One may be surprised upon entering the dance that there are no chairs, but that's not surprising, there never have been. But wait, we've overlooked something. If you don't have that little card, you can't go in. How about the music? It's not bad; as a matter of fact it is usually quite good, there is only

Rough Waters for Cioffredi And Chamber

Recreation Superintendent and Pool Committee in Disagreement.

By ED STEVENS

Rutland youngsters — those not lucky enough to spend the summer at camp — may again have to battle this summer for wading space at the North Main Street pool.

Hopes for a new city pool, first dampened by several major setbacks, could now be stalled in a disagreement between the Chamber of Commerce pool committee and the Recreation and Parks Department.

Chamber workers, facing the possibility that funds may not be available for their proposed maximum-sized swimming facility, have proposed a smaller and less costly version. The new proposal calls for a third facility in several years.

But John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation and Parks Department, says "no" to the idea.

Cioffredi states that he wants "all or nothing."

Former Chamber of Commerce Director Bernard L. Roach, who left Friday to assume the directorship of the Framingham, Mass., chamber, received a set of cost estimates from a Springfield, Mass., pool manufacturer this week.

The maximum pool which Cioffredi wants would cost the city $138,000, according to the company's estimate.

The pool contractor, Splash Inc., stated that the model would be 75 feet by 150 feet with a 30-foot square diving "T" adjacent to the swimming area.

For a medium pool measuring 60 feet by 120 feet in addition to the diving area, the cost would be $91,000. The minimum pool would cost $49,985 and would measure 82 feet by 42 feet in addition to the diving "T."

The pool committee, headed by Dr. Donald Icken of Rutland, several weeks ago requested the estimates from Splash Inc., and Paddock Construction Co., of Albany, N.Y. The committee planned to submit the most favorable estimates to the Board of Aldermen for a special May bond issue election.

The committee, hoping for matching federal aid from the state, believed that the bond issue would be for no more than $50,000.

The committee was in hopes

The pool which optimists foresee in Rutland . . . maybe.

that the state, the administrator of the federal money, would provide the other $50,000 so that pool construction could possibly begin by early summer.

The committee believed that $100,000 would cover the cost of the maximum proposed pool.

However, State Recreation Director Howard Jeffrey last week showed doubt that Rutland could be granted the matching funds.

The State Recreation Department has only $80,000 in Federal funds remaining for distribution among Vermont community recreation projects. A big percentage of the money is already pledged to smaller communities.

Jeffrey said that the allotment of the money was determined by the urgency of the community's need. He said that the state recreation department usually favored natural resource projects — the purchase of valuable recreation property in danger of being swallowed up by industry or private purchase — over construction work which could be delayed.

"I am certain that Rutland needs a new pool. But there are many more pressing needs in other state communities," Jeffrey said.

But the pool committee still hoped for the best several weeks ago as they eagerly waited for the estimates from the two pool companies.

The committee finally received the Splash Inc. plans this week.

A representative from the Paddock Co. will be in Rutland Monday to speak to the committee. It is expected that the Albany company's figures would be comparable with Splash's bids.

But the figures are higher than the committee's estimates.

According to committee officials, the bids issued by Splash do not include bathhouse facilities and walks.

But Roach said that the minimum the city could build its own facilities at a lower cost than those specified by the Springfield firm.

Roach said that the city could purchase the minimum pool and construct another minimum facility in several years.

Roach felt that the building of the smaller pool might be a good compromise and that the addition of a third pool at another site would make bathing facilities more accessible by the entire city.

The city could have the minimum pool by a $25,000 bond issue. Roach said that the smaller figure would be more easily met by the state.

But Roach said that the minimum pool would not be accepted by Cioffredi. Roach stated that in early pool committee meetings, the Recreation and Parks Department superintendent had stated that he would only be in favor of the maximum facility.

Cioffredi was quick to verify Roach's words.

"The way I look at it," Cioffredi noted, "if I get one now, they aren't going to let us have another one in a few years."

"I want one now that can serve the needs of the community."

"I think we ought to be honest to the public. I don't think we can push one pool by them now and then ask for another later."

"I want one pool that will serve the needs of the population even when the old pool gives out. I want a pool that will serve the people today as well as it will tomorrow," he said.

Cioffredi said that the life of the present municipal pool, constructed in 1929, could not be depended upon. He said that the pool was in need of repair each year.

Cioffredi noted that the old pool could be still useful in 10 years or could be obsolete tomorrow.

Friday afternoon, as concerned citizens sought a solution for the bathing problem and Icken even suggested a fund-raising program, youngsters pushed their two-wheeled along a muddy path off Gypsy Street.

Coming to Patch's Day swimming hole long before the city's present pool was the youngsters stopped and said that "swimming" ought to fine come summer."

one thing that could be better. A group which sings a few numbers instead of doing all instrumentals. How about the other facilities provided by the city of Rutland? The ski tow has been out several times, true, but it is quite common knowledge that the vandals involved here are in the 12-year old bracket. The skating rinks are excellent, as is the adult program offered. How many adults participate in the activities offered week-nights? The Recreation Department and Mr. Cioffredi have done an excellent job on the limited amount of funds the taxpayers provide for them. As a matter of memory, I seem to recall the voters of Rutland rejecting a city proposal to buy the Community House. If they didn't care at that time, why should they now? Bigger City Budget

It should come as no surprise to Rutland residents that the mayor's budget for the coming fiscal year is bigger than any of its predecessors.

Not only is it general knowledge that price levels have been edging upward but, unless one has completely missed the local news in recent weeks, there has been a considerable increase asked for school operations and the aldermen have approved higher wage scales for most city workers.

As the mayor has noted, virtually every department has felt that it had to ask for more money for next year than it received this. As usual, the chief executive has weighed these added requests and his final budget is considerably smaller than it would have been if no cuts had been made.

Even so, to carry on the city's business in ways the people have repeatedly indicated they want it to be done involves spending more money. The biggest dollar increase is for the School Department, whose request is beyond the control of City Hall; but as was noted at the time it was announced, there are some solid reasons for the need — as well as some very active ones, the children, who will be attending the city's public schools in still larger numbers next fall.

Meanwhile the city's other costs have just recently been increased by the boost in pay for the employees. That boost is estimated to call for about $50,000 more next year. If the aldermen — who can cut but not increase the mayor's figures — agree with him that some new machinery is needed by the Public Works Department, the added expense plus the wage increases will account for almost all the hike in that portion of the budget over which the mayor and aldermen have direct control.

A budget of close to $3.3 million obviously means that more money will have to be raised through local taxation despite some increases in anticipated state and federal aids and grants. But until the new grand list is completed and totalled no figure can be put on the probable tax rate.

Certainly that rate will be smaller than the 1965-66 rate of $8.85 because the ratio of assessed to full value is being adjusted (in accordance with state law) from 33 1/3 per cent to 50 per cent. If everything else were exactly the same, that means that each $1,000 of assessed valuation this current year, requiring $88.50 in taxes, would be on the new grand list at $1,500 — and a new tax rate of only $5.90 would raise the same $88.50.

Figuring the new rate, though, isn't as simple as that for the total "full, fair value" of city properties is one of the factors certain to be different, and higher, than for this fiscal year. Unless all guesses are wrong, the grand list will go up by quite a bit more than the change from 33 1/3 to 50 per cent would account for. How much more, though, remains a question that cannot yet be answered; and until it is no firm estimate of the next year's tax rate can be formed.

Band Concerts—A Slice of Nostalgia

By TOM SLAYTON

It could have been almost any warm Vermont summer night for the past 100 years.

Transistor radios, newspapers, automatic washers, electric barbecue grills, and the thousands of other symbols of the modern world were absent.

Even the ever-present automobiles weren't quite as noticeable as normal.

It was Sunday night, and the Rutland City Band was playing in Main Street Park.

The band has been playing there for the better part of a century. This is its 88th season.

By the time the concert began at 8 p.m., a good-sized crowd had gathered around the bandstand in the north end of the park.

The elderly brought lawn chairs to relax in — as they always had. And the kids, as always, clustered around the popcorn stand and french fry wagon on the park's northernmost boundary.

Teenagers walked slowly can hear the brassy, confident around, gossiping noisily, and a city policeman, his hands clasped behind his back, sauntered casually through the mass of people, stopping occasionally to playfully bop a kid on the head with his plastic police flashlight.

Through the whole confused mass, big dogs, little dogs, and one tiny white poodle sniffed, looking for friends or new acquaintances.

The daytime things — war, peace, budgets, taxes, and bond issues — got further away as twilight deepened, and the band's tempo increased.

"They really sound good this year, don't they," an elderly Rutlander commented, glancing toward the bandstand where conductor Raymond H. Brown held sway.

For the adults, the summer concerts by the city band — the oldest municipal band in the U. S. — are an exercise in nostalgia and relaxation.

Reclining in lawn chairs, they marches that have been popular from the day they were written, and forget for a few moments that the baby will (eventually) have to be changed and the soup could (possibly) boil over if it isn't watched attentively.

"The American Patrol," "Snow White Fantasy," "Yankee Rhythm," and "Officer of the Day March" roar optimistically through the park, and the day's cares seem a long way off.

For the kids, the concerts are a chance to stay out a little later than usual, a chance to burn off the excess energy that long Vermont winters can store in youthful veins, and a harbinger of the long, aimless days of summer to come.

"The old folks come to watch the youngsters run about, and the kids come to laugh at the old ones," one concert-goer said.

And with the cheerful strains of the Rutland City Band in the background, no one comes to have a bad time. Happiness is in fashion.

By the close of the evening, even the most cynical of teenagers and the most relaxed of the elders can clamber to their feet from the grassy park ground and stand slightly more erect than usual to hear the strains of the national anthem.

From there, it's back home to the cares of the world for another week — until the next city band concert provides an escape.

'The 73'

Recreation Areas

Announcement of the opening of another commercial recreation area, this one in Pittsford, calls attention once more to the growing volume of recreation facilities in Vermont open to visitors and our own residents.

Vermont never had any shortage of places to swim in our ponds, lakes and streams, but the number of swimming places open to the public and under supervision was exceedingly limited until recent years. At the time Rutland's municipal swimming pool was opened in the late twenties, few small communities had such facilities for the public.

One of the best indices to the popularity of the swimming pool today is the large number of pools which have been constructed by motels as an added attraction for their places of business. Any family traveling with children on a hot day is most likely to stop at the motels which advertise pools.

The success of state beach and camping areas in State Parks has led to a growing private business of the same type, providing additional facilities for swimming, camping and picnicking, all of which are in growing demand. Under favorable weather conditions in midsummer, all such recreation areas are likely to be busy and the most popular ones overcrowded.

The number of places to swim has multiplied so much that it is sometimes assumed that all children of the modern age know how to take care of themselves in the water. This is not necessarily true. As an increasing number of children have learned how to swim, the minority who haven't learned tend to avoid the water. As they grow older, they are less likely to learn how to swim, perhaps out of reluctance to admit to others that they can't. Parents are reminded to help their children become familiar with the water when they are young. With all of today's opportunities for swimming lessons, everyone should be able to swim — for safety reasons and for enjoyment.

Federal Cash Likely For Proposed Swimming Pool

(Vermont Press Bureau)

MONTPELIER — A spokesman for the Interagency Committee on Natural Resources said Friday he is certain Rutland's proposed new swimming pool will receive "conditional approval" in the very near future.

Development Commissioner Elbert G. Moulton, vice chairman of the committee, said he is "confident" the proposal will be okayed.

Approval by that committee would make Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation (BOR) funds available for half the estimated $112,000 cost of the project.

Moulton added, however, that no final approval will be given until Rutland voters approve their own share of the cost.

"(This is real good news to us," said Rutland Recreation Superintendent John W. Cioffredi. "It makes the project much more attractive to the voters with the federal government carrying half the load — and we need the facility.")

(Dr. Donald Icken, chairman of the Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce swimming pool committee, was unavailable for comment.)

Rutland's present pool was built in 1929, and a new one has been in the discussion stages for five years.

State Recreation Commissioner Howard Jeffery said that plans for the proposed pool are nearly complete. Rutland officials will be in Montpelier Tuesday to show him the plan.

His job is to make sure engineering details meet federal requirements before the Interagency Committee gives its approval.

Moulton's policy of giving only "conditional approval" to Rutland and any other municipal projects in the works was outlined Friday when the committee met at the State Office Building here.

Moulton said he thinks the committee would be out of line in approving projects before the towns came up with the matching money.

He added he has talked with Rutland Mayor Harold Nichols, and set a Nov. 1 deadline for the matching money to be voted by the city.

If the money is not voted by then, the project will presumably be scrapped for the present.

The idea for Rutland's new pool was given impetus by the special committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

The committee, headed by Dr. Icken, decided to jump into a vote for a bond issue this fall even if federal money was not available.

Selected as the pool to be erected at White Playground, was an Olympic model with a price tag of $112,000. Half this sum could be matched by the federal government through BOR funds.

The BOR matching money comes from admission tickets to national parks and excise taxes on outboard motors, and is given the state to meet 50 per cent of cost of certain recreation projects.

The lion's share of the money goes to the Forests and Parks and Fish and Game Departments, but Gov. Philip H. Hoff has called for more emphasis on municipal projects.

Area Artist Has International Flavor

Mrs. Barbara Strzelec Will Give Instruction at Recreation Center Here.

BY MERLE JACKSON

A West Rutland artist who says she is influenced by both impressionists and expressionists but calls herself "just an artist," will direct art lessons at the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center starting this Saturday.

Mrs. Barbara Strzelec, mother of two children — and one on the way — will conduct the classes sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department.

Mrs. Strzelec, the daughter of a U. S. Foreign Service employe has exhibited her works at the Rutland Fair and has sold some of them in the New York City area. She works in oils and water colors, as well as doing sculpture, wood cuts, and lithographs.

Because of her father's duties with the government, she had a chance to live in Brazil, Mexico, Venezuela, and the West Indies. She said she was influenced by the bright colors of South America.

Commenting on her artist's philosophy, she said:

"I believe everybody should do some sort of creative work, just to have it for an outlet.

She cited the growing leisure time and its relation to the world of art. Former President Eisenhower and the late British leader Winston Churchill are well-known examples of men who have painted for enjoyment, she said.

Among her artistic heroes are Picasso, Matisse, and Van Gogh. As a result of her travels and admiration of the works of such painters as Van Gogh, she said, her work sometimes exhibits an "international flavor."

Mrs. Strzelec, who said she is also a practicing astrologist, taught art this year in the elementary grades of the Rutland Town School System. She plans to do it again this coming school year. This past year, she taught about 220 pupils two and a half days a week.

Recreation Department: An 'Up' Summer

Cioffredi Outlines Full Program of Activity at City Facilities.

"It's gonna be an Up Summer."

That was the word Tuesday from John Cioffredi, superintendent of the Rutland Recreation Department, as he outlined plans for his department's summer program.

Included in the planned activities are block dances, swimming parties, softball leagues, outdoor movies, tennis lessons, hand concerts, senior citizen activities — in short, Cioffredi said, something for everyone.

Swimming Pool

He answered everyone's perennial question by announcing that the swimming pool will be ready for the first splash on Monday, June 6.

The pool will be open at 9 a.m. each weekday morning for lessons until noon. No public swimming will be allowed during the lesson hours. Afternoon hours will be from 1:30 to 8 p.m., except Saturday and Sunday, when the pool will be open from 1 to 6 p.m. Public swimming will be allowed from 9:30 a.m. to noon each Saturday.

Registration for lessons must be made this year at the Recreation Center on Center Street before June 13. Instruction will be for two four-week periods, from June 20 to July 15, and from Aug. 1 to Aug. 26.

Classifications for these instruction periods will be made at the pool from June 13 - 18 for the first four-week period and July 25-30 for the second. Classification hours are from 9 a.m. to noon and 1:30 to 8 p.m.

Classes will be given for beginners, intermediates, swimmers, advanced swimmers, junior life savers, senior life savers, and water ballet swimmers.

Junior life savers must be between the ages of 12 and 16. Senior life savers must be at least 17 years old.

The city swimming championships will be held Aug. 25, while the annual water carnival will be held Sept. 1.

Two special age groups will also get special treatment at the pool. Teens will have a special dance - and - swim program every Thursday under the lights from 8 to 10 p.m., while businessmen can splash in quiet comfort Monday through Friday from noon to 1:30 p.m.

Adult lessons will be given every Tuesday and Thursday from 7 to 8 p.m.

Playgrounds

The usual rounds of story-telling, softball, games, cook-outs, volleyball, horseshoes will commence at Rotary, Meadow Street and White Playgrounds June 27. Playgrounds will be open from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Among the special days planned at the playgrounds are Carnival Days, pet shows, hat shows, Playground Olympic Days, and splash parties.

The Recreation Department will also sponsor a pilot project at a separate playground for retarded and handicapped children.

"After all," Cioffredi said, "the recreation program is for everyone in the city, and handicapped kids are no exception."

Sports

The City Softball League (open class, fast pitching) will kick up dust every weekday evening at White Playground. Players 30 years old and older will be cavorting around Meadow Street Playground at the same time, 6:30 p.m.

The little league will be divided into northern (Rotary Field) and southern (White Playground) segments for boys 10 to 12 years old.

In the Mitey Mite League, for boys 7 to 9 years old, games will be held weekday mornings at 9 a.m. at Meadow Street and Rotary Playgrounds.

Aldermen Approve Salary Raises Totaling $50,000

An estimated $50,000 was approved Monday night by the Board of Aldermen to cover pay raises for the city employees.

The aldermen unanimously granted the pay raises without debate after hearing a report from the Finance Committee which called for:

1. A general increase for all city employees of $4.50 a week.
2. A wage adjustment of three cents additional per hour for a Public Works Department auto mechanic for use of his own tools.
3. Five cents an hour additional for three mechanics and a relief man at the Sewage Disposal Plant.
4. An increase of $600 a year in the salary of Fire Chief Alfred H. Koltonski.
5. Hospitalization insurance payments by the city increased up to $5 a month for each employee.
6. Two additional paid holidays for all employees, not to be paid while on sick leave.
7. Salary increases of $350 a year for Herbert L. Erickson, acting commissioner of Public Works, John W. Clouffredi, recreation director, Mrs. Martha DePoy, welfare director, and Henry P. Battles, city clerk.
8. But no increases for the Board of Aldermen, city treasurer, and the police chief.

The report, signed by the three committee members, Aldermen Arthur E. Crowley, Howard Douglas and John Mullen, came after a week of aldermanic meetings and negotiations. Apparently, because the action took only four minutes Monday night, most of the negotiations and discussions with members of the police and fire departments and the State, County and Municipal Employees Union took place behind closed doors.

Two weeks ago, the aldermen voted an eight-cent-an-hour wage hike for the city employees, at a total cost of $33,700. But considerable pressure from the city workers forced a reconsideration of that action last week. Instead, the board, at a meeting on May 16, rescinded its previous action, and decided to negotiate again.

After the vote Monday night, members of the police and fire department delegations, who had been negotiating with the aldermen for $5-a-week raises, expressed satisfaction with the new plans.

A member of the employees union said that he would take the plan back to the members of the union for their approval, although he did say that the $4.50 a week, plus the additional $5 for hospitalization appeared to be quite satisfactory.

The union, which includes personnel of the Public Works Department and the Sewage Disposal Plant, had previously informed the board in a letter that its membership had voted to reject the eight-cent proposal of two weeks ago.

At the time of its rejection on May 10, the union was asking for additional negotiations in order to obtain a wage increase of 25 cents an hour. However, they had agreed with the Public Works Committee that an increase of 12 cents an hour would be acceptable.

The action by the board Monday night brought the figure close to the union's requests, the officials said.

It is expected that the union membership will vote in favor of the new wage increases and fringe benefits.

Rutland Pool Plans Under State Study

(Vermont Press Bureau)
MONTPELIER — The Inter-agency Committee on Natural Resources tabled Monday Rutland's request for extra aid to build a municipal swimming pool.

The project was referred to a five-man committee for further discussion before coming up for agency approval.

Development Commissioner Elbert G. Moulton said Monday that action was held off pending discussion with Recreation Director Howard Jeffrey.

It is his understanding, Moulton said, that federal funds for municipal projects may be cut back "10 to 15 percent" and they want to look at available funding.

Jeffrey wasn't at the meeting. Moulton added, however, that the Rutland project still carries a top priority tag, and that action on the matter will be taken up sometime later this week.

Also referred to the committee was a proposal to develop the South Londonderry Dam Mill Pond and Park.

Members of the subcommittee are Moulton, Jeffrey, Higbee,

Commissioner Russell A. Holden, Water Resources Commissioner Reinhold W. Thieme and Fish and Game Commissioner Edward F. Kehoe.

Receiving approval and due for submission to the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation of eligibility review were three Fish and Game Department projects which carry a $148,000 price tag.

These are stream bank development projects on the Ottawaquichee, Battenkill and West Rivers.

Also approved, pending future federal funding, were two Forests and Parks Department proposals for the Groton and St. Catherine Parks.

The department wants to develop the Weybridge caves as a natural area for $18,000 and this was given the nod.

A project to convert Burlington's Perkins Pier into a recreation center was "approved in principle" and referred to Moulton and Jeffrey for review.

'You Get What You Pay For'

Rutland aldermen's discussions of new pay scales for city employees are a reminder that the adage, "You get what you pay for" applies to municipal and state and federal government employees as well as to those of private industry and to the buying of all the goods and services done by our American families.

Just as a hamburger costs less than an order of lamb chops and a small foreign compact can be had for a lot less than a Rolls Royce, so governments at any level can expect to have to pay wages and salaries commensurate with the job to be done: the kind of work, the skill or special training required, the pay in private industry or self employment for similar abilities.

As noted in the columns from time to time in the past, government employment — especially federal but state and local too — for long had special advantages over work for private business. For one thing, there was almost always a measure of stability, of tenure. Once on the payroll, a worker could feel pretty sure of his job for about as long as he felt like holding onto it. That has been so true, in fact, that many a higher up has cursed the system which makes it so difficult to get rid of inefficient or unneeded help!

Again, there is typically a sickness, vacation and retirement program in government employment that until fairly recently was considerably more sure and more attractive than private industry was offering. For these and other reasons, as well as for the desire to be of service to the public that really is a factor, fortunately, for so many dedicated government workers, it has long been possible for government wage levels to be considerably below those prevailing in private business.

Bolstering that possibility and helping to keep it in effect has of course been the desire of officials to keep public expenses, and thus taxes, down. It used to be a political precept that raising tax rates was apt to be a step toward political oblivion. Whether that's still true or not may, from some more recent occurrences, seem to be a matter of argument. But the fact remains that both tradition and political expediency tend to minimize the cash paid for doing the public's work.

At times like these, though, when there's more talk of labor shortage than of unemployment, it becomes apparent that if the public is to gain and hold the services of qualified workers, public pay (of course including fringe benefits) must come at least within shouting distance of what people with similar skills and abilities can earn working for somebody else — or for themselves.

There are still some advantages in working for any unit of government, at any level. In many public jobs, too, there is a measure of prestige. But Social Security, Medicare and the many private extra or supplementary retirement and other benefit programs have narrowed the gap. If the public expects to have competent people working on public jobs, whether ditch digger or psychiatrist, it will have to learn that public pay scales must conform, at least in general, to those in private business.

About 16 Rutland area camping and sports equipment dealers are scheduled to display the latest in camping and sports equipment, according to William Fredette, show chairman.

Area stores and dealers expected to exhibit their wares at the show are:

Roberts Gas & Electric and Eddy's Marine, Poulney; Lloyd Provin and May's Mobile Homes, Pittsford; Lake's End Marina & Garage Inc., Wells; Howard E. Frohock & Sons, South Charles-

The American Red Cross will have a first aid station at the fairgrounds for the show and the campers' association will maintain a refreshment stand and a membership booth.

About 30 association member families intend to camp at the fairgrounds for the duration of the exhibit.

This will mark the second consecutive year the family campers have sponsored a display of outdoor living and recreation equipment.

Sponsored by the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department which is headed by John Cioffredi, the Rutland Family Campers Association was organized about three years ago.

Cioffredi, Richard Burke, Jack Howard, Thomas Canty, Henry Grupe, Jerry Connors and Melvin Childs were the prime movers in the establishment of the association.

The association was organized in 1963 to foster fellowship among campers; encourage development of camping area; provide information about camping equipment; promote good camping practices; work for conservation and to represent family campers in matters affecting their interests.

Each camping season the association plans three or four weekend outings at Vermont state parks where as many as 50 or more members families may gather to swim, fish, hike and participate in numerous other outdoor activities.

During the winter months, the association holds monthly meetings to plan for future activities. Membership in the association is open to any family interested in camping. The membership fee is $10 a year per family. Currently, 143 families belong to the association. Although membership is not restricted to any particular locality, most of the families live in the Rutland area.

Any boy wishing to play in the Little League this summer must complete an application. This includes boys who played last year. Extra applications are available at the Recreation Center.

Fishing Derby Is Planned By The Downtown Athletic Club

The Rutland Downtown Athletic Club has completed plans for a Fishing Derby it will hold Saturday, May 21, it was announced Tuesday night by a club spokesman.

The Derby, which will be for boys and girls in city elementary schools, will be run by a committee made up of Robert Dikeman, John Cioffredi and Leo Bundsie.

The contest is scheduled for 9 a.m. to 12 noon on the 21st at a site to be announced the morning of the Derby. Because the area will be stocked with fish, it was decided by the committee to withhold disclosure of the site.

Edward Kehoe, Vermont fish and game commissioner, has promised the Club at least 300 and possibly more legal trout.

The Downtown A.C. is sponsoring the program with the aid of the Rutland Recreation Department.

The Downtown Athletic Club has called a special meeting for Tuesday, May 12 and has requested all members with an interest in the Derby to be present. The meeting will be held at the Lawrence gym at 7 p.m.

New Look at Main St. Park As Beautification Project Begins

John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of recreation and parks, said the maintenance crew in his department has been hard at work the past few years in a concerted scrubdown - fix-up program.

This year's beautification efforts have centered on Main Street Park, the city's most noticeable green spot, he said.

The roof of the bandstand underwent rebuilding and reshingling at the hands of the department's maintenance crew, and the bandstand sides have been repainted, Cioffredi said.

In addition, shrubs and ornamental trees — many of them transplanted from the edges of the depot parking lot — have been planted throughout the length of the three-block park.

"We will plant more shrubs, and flowers also," the recreation chief said, "and the bare spots in the south end of the park will be reseeded."

Added to the work of adding greenery at the park has been the drudgery of removing dead plants and tree stumps and pruning the park trees.

Rutland's Chief Batmanian Adds Zest to National Craze

DESERVED

To the Editor: Last Saturday night I was one of many who attended the Second Annual Talent Round-Up sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department. For approximately an hour and a half I watched with interest the 21 acts of exceptionally varied and commendable talent.

I firmly believe the judges' choice of the Plunkouts for first place was not merely a good choice. It was superb.

In a letter written to you on April 27, Evelyn E. Rowe of Pittsford stated, "For entertainment as Plunkouts could well deserve first place, but for down to earth legitimate good talent, they certainly didn't measure up to the other contestants." In my opinion, this jug band is in all sincerity down to earth, and legitimate. They are so because their style of music is a tradition.

I have watched these young men since they began their group as a hobby. I know, as do many others, of the many hours of work this group has put in, and still continues to.

I considered the Plunkouts as the most unique act in the Talent Show. It is this uniqueness that helps make their act a good one. But it is more than that. It is extremely difficult to begin with so little and produce a sound that amounts to so much.

If I had a hat, Evelyn E. Rowe, I'd tip it, and congratulate the Plunkouts for an award well deserved.

JUG BANDS

To the Editor: I read with disappointment Evelyn Rowe's letter to the editor (Herald, April 27) concerning what she thought to be a poor choice of a winner in the Rutland Recreation Department's Talent Round-Up, last Saturday.

I question Mrs. Rowe's idea of what talent is. She says that the Plunkouts' jug band could be a first rate comedy group, but have no real "down to earth legitimate good talent." It seems to me that young men who are able to adapt music to their own tastes and likes, and produce a homogeneous sound from unrelated instruments, have more creative talent than someone who merely plays according to the written music. It is also my premise that good comedians must have a tremendous amount of talent.

Jug bands are not usually organized to astound the world with their musical abilities, they are organized for fun. Mrs. Rowe apparently realizes that the Plunkouts have fun while they perform, but she does not seem to understand the problems of playing the scale on a washtub bass.

I agree that there were many other talented people at the Talent Round-Up, but I maintain that the Plunkouts were the proper choice because of their creative ability and uniqueness, as well as their musical talent.

The batman craze has finally hit the bigtime, but for the nation's Chief Batmanian this comes as no surprise.

Tom Fagan of Rutland, recently elected to the post, has been pushing for acceptance of the caped crusader for years.

His campaign slogan noted that he introduced Batman as a feature attraction of the Rutland Halloween parade, a claim no other municipality could make.

Fagan works in public relations for a Rutland publishing firm.

Comic books and Batman have intrigued him since World War II. He has saved his books which he values at about $4,000. Frequently, he wears a watch with Bat wings on its face, a Bat tie clip and a hand-made Bat ring.

Nowadays, this is not unusual, but Fagan has had these accessories for years. He also is assistant editor of a new publication called "Batmania."

As an authority on Batman, Fagan, who is a board member of the Academy of Comic Book Fan Collectors of America, at first was disappointed in the televised program of his idol.

He wrote in the Rutland Herald: "What does it take to stop a comic book hero dead in his tracks? Overwhelming odds? An exotic beauty garbed in Black . . . Necromancy? No—there's a surer way. Put him on television and give him a script and a story line . . ."

This Batman fan has another related interest. He feels more should be done to promote the understanding and prevent the needless slaughter of the bat itself.

"Too many people are fearful because of exaggerated accounts of rabid bats and vampire bats in South America," he says.

DESERVING???

To the Editor: Are you kidding? I'm glad the Castleton people are so loyal to their buddies or classmates. I've noticed that the only ones who thought the jugband did deserve first prize are from Castleton State College. If you can find five, reasonably intelligent people who do not know these fellows and have a knowledge of and are skilled in music or any other kind of talent (a jugband, for instance) who thought these boys really, truly, and honestly deserved it "I'll eat my hat."

There's a rumor going around (which I am inclined to believe is extremely true) that the talent scout from "The Ted Mack Original Amateur Hour" was totally disgusted with the judges' decision. Since he was a man capable of judging such a show why wasn't he made a judge? This man has seen thousands of acts and it would have been fair if he had judged the presentations.

Furthermore, I am inclined to doubt just how long this jugband has practiced together. Their stage appearance was atrocious. In my estimation, a four-year-old child can chew gum like a cow chews its cud. To produce the sounds they did (college students) must have taken, at the most, about three days.

The only DESERVING choice in the show was the tap-dancer. Folk-singers are "a-dime-a-dozen."

Some of the acts in the show were really great and much more deserving. It was really a shame because all the people who spent so much time working to make it a success must have really been let down.

future of our country. Well, probably they will grow up, but think now they are going to feel about their pierced ears in — perhaps the Senate.

Many will not allow anyone to pass without stepping off the walk, but worst many do not walk on the sidewalks. They cut across the lawns until some of them have worn paths. They look in your windows so that it is necessary to close your shades.

This is only a small minority but it is distressing for no one dares to put a stop to them for we would expect something worse. I know one boy in particular who though seeming to be at least 15, should be thoroughly paddled. No, teenagers who treat others in this manner are still children. Can it be possible that the parents know what their children are doing?

I was much interested in the letter written by Anne L. Clark of Castleton State College. I do not doubt that the Plunkouts had spent much time in their act and that they brought a large amount of rosters. This is good entertainment as a novelty but they cannot expect to eventually get a job as is the usual purpose in being on the talent show. It is a hobby, and no doubt to these people important. Also, were these people Vermonters? We really expected at least that as contestants. A young man who is a real musician and a young lady who is a talented dancer. These are both artists, and were snubbed.

With all respect to the above writer and her young friends I still say that art in this instance should rate above a hobby. Well, that is America. You can gripe and so can I.

Rotary Field Fire Causes Little Damage

A short circuit was blamed Monday for a small fire at Rotary Field House off North Street. Lt. Martin F. Kelly reported the fire scorched the outside area above the front doorway to the house Monday about 9:30 p.m. No other damage happened, he said.

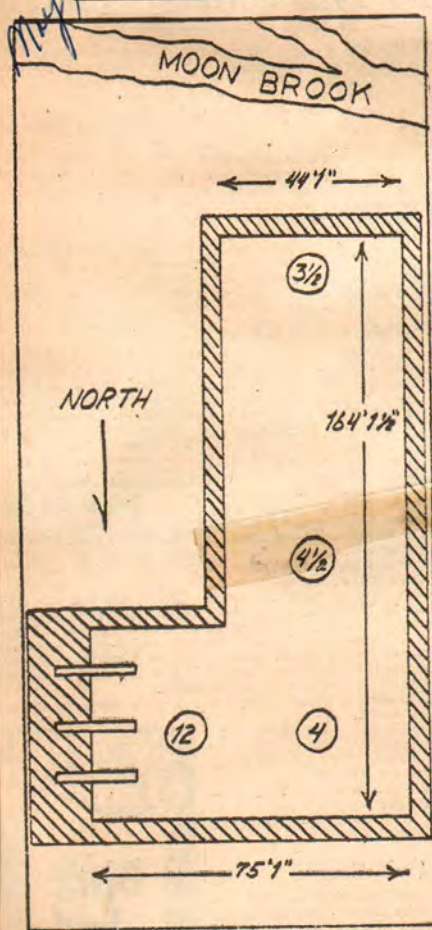

Two youths, Robert VanBuskirk and Thomas Wormwood, both members of the Rutland City Band, which was using the building at the time, said they noticed the fire and poured water on it before the firemen arrived. Chief Alfred H. Koltonski summed up the situation saying, "They were playing hot music. Engines 1, 2, 3 made the call at which a booster line was used. Firemen removed some facing boards and checked the entire building before leaving. The two youths said they were former members of the Rutland "Alert Radio" Controlled Search & Rescue Team."

Rutland Historical Society Swimming Pool—Splash!

This is outline of Rutland's new swimming pool, which a local committee will recommend to the voters. It would be located at White Playground, west of the present field house. The Chamber of Commerce committee which worked on the details said Tuesday the low-lying structure was planned for use in conjunction with the present old North Main Street pool, not as a replacement. Circled figures in the drawing above indicate length and width. Diving boards would be at section in lower left of the reverse "L", separate from where the regular swimming is planned. Bath house to upper left of this sketch would be kept separate from parking, which would generally be to the north.

Chamber Committee Set to Roll on Campaign for Second Facility.

By KEN WILD
A Rutland study committee took the big plunge Tuesday and decided to promote a modern new swimming pool for the city.

The Chamber of Commerce committee decided on the following points:

1. The pool will be at White Playground.
2. The present 35-year-old pool on North Main Street will continue to be used.
3. Cost will be $119,000 if the nearby area is blacktopped for parking, and $112,198 if the parking blacktop is omitted.
4. A bond issue is likely to be asked for in the fall.

The committee, headed by Dr. Donald Icken, has labored over details for several months. They decided upon the plans for site and construction Tuesday after many consultations with the state Recreation Department, national recreation advisors, and population trend experts.

Plans for the campaign are to be formulated later.

The new pool will not be above ground, as is the North Main Street pool.

The concrete-and-steel structure will be sunk in the ground and will be "L" shaped, with a concrete strip and fence all around it.

The price of the pool includes all equipment, such as underwater lights, diving boards, lifeguard towers, ladders, and ropes. It will be completely equipped and ready to use when it is turned over for the city's use.

It will be considerably longer (164 feet) than the present pool, which is an oval 80 by 120 feet in size.

The general swimming area will be considerably shallower than that of the present pool, ranging from 3.5 feet at the south end to 4.5 feet in the center and tapering up to 4 feet at the north end.

The diving area, in the eastern section of the reverse "L" (see drawing), will be 12 feet in depth. No wading pool is to be included, since Recreation Superintendent John W. Clifford said the state officials advised him not to have a place where children could accidentally cross from a wading pool to the deeper area.

The site is west of the field house now located at the playground. One of the ball fields will have to give way to the pool.

The committee plans a bath house next to the pool, separate from the parking area — but the cost will not have to be taken by the city, according to the plans announced Tuesday. Local service clubs will be asked to raise money to pay for the bath house.

To the Editor: I want to answer the letter from "Disgusted Spectator" concerning the Plunkouts.

1. Castleton people are loyal to their classmates? Who can better judge entertainment than college kids who listen to music morning, noon, and night.

2. He speaks of Rumor. My dictionary defines rumor as "common gossip, a story circulating without known foundation or authority." It is possible that the sponsors were disgusted because the winner was a group, maybe embarrassed is a better word. The "All Expense Paid Trip to New York City" is $50 cash.

3. Poor musicians? The boys in this band were picked after a long search and careful consideration. They are all exceptionally talented. One of them has won several prizes on his own, two of them in the month of April, not counting the jug band.

4. They didn't deserve first prize? May I remind "Disgusted Spectator" that the Plunkouts received the best audience reaction. In my opinion the talent in that show was pretty poor. The only good acts besides the Plunkouts were, the third prize winner and the girl with the lovely voice. I don't have the program so I can't give her name.

It all adds up to the same old story. If they are college boys they have two strikes against them. Let's congratulate five nice guys who made first prize in spite of it.

"Rutland is fortunate to have such a high caliber caller," John W. Clouf, recreation department chief, said. The Westfield, Mass., woman has performed all over the country and recently returned from a mid-west tour.

Square dance fans from Burlington, Montpelier, Springfield, Brattleboro, and Bennington have indicated they plan to attend.

Officials Optimistic About Of Otter Creek as Rec

State and city officials, looking for potential recreation areas, took a walk along the banks of Otter Creek Friday afternoon.

Long heavily polluted and considered unusable for recreation purposes, Otter Creek has undergone a startling clean-up in recent years.

Sewage disposal plants such as Rutland's (installed in 1961) and other municipal sewage treatment and disposal facilities have played a major role in improving the creek waters.

When Rutland's Sewage disposal plant was set up, preliminary discussions of boating and fishing sites were undertaken. But no concrete plan was made. The officials who toured areas of Otter Creek brought an idea of funds those talks.

State, Local Experts Tour Area Friday Afternoon, Discuss Future Plans.

Recently, however, federal bureau of Outdoor Recreation funds have become available for financing recreation areas of all kinds, and interest in Otter Creek has been renewed.

Rutland Mayor Harold J. Nichols, state Fish and Game Commissioner Edward Kehoe, Rutland Recreation Department John Clouf, U. S. Soil Conservationist Harold Pulling, and Otter Creek Soil Conservation District Supervisor John Kaldy were among the officials who toured areas of Otter Creek.

"That's a beautiful stream," Pulling exclaimed after the tour was completed. "We should have more good recreation spots in this area, and Otter Creek could easily give us some of our best sites."

Clouf agreed. "This part of Vermont is serving a lot of the Northeast for recreation," he said, "but we should have more facilities for the people who already live here."

"We could, with the proper support, set up boat slips, canoe slips, and fishing areas, and have plenty of parking space and picnic and game areas as well," Pulling said.

Authorities have said that Otter Creek, the longest river in Vermont, could be the first river in the state to be completely cleaned of sewage and waste material.

Frederick O. Smith, University of Vermont agricultural economics professor, said in a recent article:

"Otter Creek presents one of the greatest opportunities in Vermont for moving to a position of national preeminence in resource management ... What an accomplishment it would be to have the first major 'clean' stream in the country."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

TALENT CHOICE

To the Editor: Last Saturday night I attended the second annual Talent Round-Up Show sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department.

They presented some excellent talent, but how the judges could select the Jug Band for first place winner is beyond me.

To have this group represent the Rutland area for an audition on the Ted Mack show certainly is no feather in our cap or a fair representation of the excellent talent that we do have here.

I wonder if they were judged or if they just had their name pulled out of a hat?

I am also skeptical about one more thing. I noticed that no other individual or groups were photographed during the performances except the Plunkouts. What Gives? Having a winner such as this group is no incentive to anyone with legitimate talent to even want to participate.

The second and third place winners are deserving of their awards, but the Plunkouts certainly weren't the winners in my estimation.

I'm not criticizing the Recreation Department, they produced an excellent evening's enjoyment.

For entertainment as a hilarious comedy group the Plunkouts could well deserve first place, but for down to earth legitimate good talent they certainly didn't measure up to the other contestants.

Poor Farm Acres Sought As Area for Recreation

Aldermanic Debate Complicated by Petition Signed by 247 Residents.

Most of the aldermen want to sell it to a developer.

A minority of the aldermen want it sold in lots to home owners.

But, a number of area residents do not want it sold at all. This is the status of a rather large parcel of land located in the northeast part of the city along Woodstock Avenue.

Debated over for several years, and in the last four aldermen's meetings, the land is currently being tossed around like a political balloon — no one knows how the land should be disposed.

From the aldermen's point of view, the issue was further complicated recently by a petition signed by 247 city residents urging the Board of Aldermen not to sell the acres on the city's Poor Farm. Instead, the petitioners asked the board to consider using the land for recreational purposes.

The aldermen accepted the petition and placed it on file.

However, John S. Maslack of 123 Harrington Ave., one of the initiators of the petition along with Erwin E. West Jr., said Monday he hopes to be able to address the board at a future meeting to present his case.

In his petition, Maslack pointed out that the roughly 20 acres on Woodstock Avenue are "probably the last area of city-owned land available for public use in the northeast section of the city of Rutland."

In addition, the Rutlanders stated that this section of the city is rapidly developing into a major residential area, which will need public parks, athletic fields or sites for schools.

They argue that the city should not go into the real estate business, but instead, consider this area as a site for the future recreational facilities of the entire city.

Maslack went a bit further Monday evening and said that municipal institutions have recently discussed needs for a school expansion, swimming pools, and/or a municipal stadium larger than the one at Rutland High School.

"It appeared to us," Maslack continued, "that the disposal of the property should not be done in haste. It was thought that the petition would cause them (aldermen) to hold up on the disposition and give the people an opportunity to present their views."

Alderman John Mullen, in discussing the Woodstock Avenue 615, said at the last meeting that the acreage was not suited for recreation. "This area would not lend itself to recreational facilities because it is on a slope," he said.

Mullen, however, quickly added, "I'm a nature lover myself. I like to roll in the grass, but in this location you would roll right down the hill."

Maslack disagreed. He estimated that the total difference between the high and low points in this area is not more than 100 feet. "This could easily be flat space," he said.

Mullen also chided the petition because it was circulated throughout the city "...even in parking lots of shopping centers."

But, Maslack retorted, "This is not an area thing. The whole city should be involved. The people own this property, and they should have an opportunity to vote on it."

A vote on the issue was demanded by the petitioners in the petition to the board. It read: "If any such proposal for the transfer of said Poor Farm Properties to private ownership is approved by the Board of Aldermen, that any such approval be subject to ratification or rejection by the voters at the next general or special election of the City of Rutland, and that in the event of such approval by the Board of Aldermen that the Board take steps, forthwith, to present its action to the voters for such ratification of rejection at the next election."

In discussing the proposed sale of the lots on the north side of Woodstock Avenue, the board debated the issue of selling the lots to a developer as a whole or to sell them individually.

The issue was left hanging after a motion to table the proposal was passed.

The Master Plan for the city, dated 1962, states that there are only 13 acres of playgrounds in the city for a population of 18,325.

The plan said there should be 22 acres of recreational facilities or six acres per 5,000 people.

Twelve acres of land — divided into 26 lots — are presently being considered by the board.

In the city plan, the recommendation was made that: "The existing playgrounds be enlarged and that a new playground be developed in the vicinity of the Northeast School."

To sell, or not to sell, that is the question, and it is expected the board will act on the proposal, once again, at their next meeting.

A Meeting

The Rutland Downtown Athletic Club will meet Monday evening at 7:30 at the Lawrence Community Center. All members are urged to attend as several important programs are to be discussed.

RUTLAND NEEDS

To the Editor: I would like to take this opportunity to disagree with Craigie S. Perkins on what he considers to be the major municipal problems in the city of Rutland. I will agree that storm sewers, sewage disposal, and reconstruction of sidewalks are important for the efficient running of any municipality. But I, and many more like me, feel that there are deeper and more basic problems to cope with, if Rutland is to be a city that attracts people.

The first of these problems is employment for the high school and college graduate. Lt. Gov. Daley stated the other day that there are "jobs" for these people. Who wants a job? Anybody can get a job. We want "career opportunities." A career is that something which is emotionally and financially satisfying. And I don't believe that there are many career opportunities in this area.

Another basic problem in Rutland is the general attitude of the population to growth and expansion. That attitude is called apathy. The majority says why worry about it; it costs too much; it won't help me personally. But this is a good attitude. Everyone thinks this way, so why should Rutland be different. We would still be in the Middle Ages if people thought that way then. Rutland has to move forward.

The greatest opportunity in history is knocking at Rutland's door. That opportunity is recreation. Rutland, and the state in general, is being, and will continue to be, exposed to people from "down country". There will be men coming into Vermont who aren't afraid to think; who aren't afraid of progress; and who aren't afraid of being different. Unless we change our way of thinking they won't come to our area. We have to be progressive. And by progressive, I don't mean building another shopping area. What good are more stores, if the population is static. We've got to have something attractive to offer people. And backward thinking isn't that something.

I think that the solution to our problems lies with the youth of today. We have got to have young leadership. And this applies in California, Kansas, New York, and Mississippi, as well as in Vermont. You, the older generation shouldn't be so smug. We don't have a bed of roses within which to live. Granted, we need your experience. But what we don't need is your attitude that progress ends in Rutland in 1966. We need better schools, better career opportunities, better facilities for recreation, and above all we need better thinking as regards to what are the problems of Rutland.

Board Battles Beetle Plague

Aldermen Vote to Seek Prices of Spray for 750 Elm Trees in Rutland; Discuss City Hall's Dirty Windows, Municipal Pay Raises.

By BOB BABCOCK

The beetles were eliminated, the windows will be washed, and requests for pay raises were received in action by the Board of Aldermen Monday night.

The aldermen voted, after lengthy debate, to ask for price quotations for a dormant spray of the city's 750 elm trees, in order to eliminate the elm bark beetle.

A report from Herbert L. Erickson, acting Commissioner of Public Works, and the Public Works Committee urged the spray, with a second "lefa spray" to be applied later on in the spring.

Debate centered on who was to do the job and on the question of an emergency.

Alderman Howard Douglas questioned the emergency of the situation: "This is a re-occurring problem. Why is there an emergency?"

Alderman Daniel Allen answered that he had received complaints from Rutlanders of beetles invading their houses. He also cited the infrequent spraying in the past as a reason for the existence of so many insects.

The aldermen then urged Erickson to contact leading botanists in the state for their recommendations on the types of sprays to use.

Douglas amended the motion so that Erickson will submit to the aldermen his plans for spraying the trees by Feb. 1, 1967, in order to ensure that the action takes place before the middle of April in future years.

The board also granted a request from Mayor Harold J. Nichols to appropriate $150 from the city's general fund to pay for the washing of the many windows at City Hall.

Nichols pointed out that the windows haven't been cleaned since 1963. This two-man job will be handled by a local window-washing company, the mayor added.

Continuing their house cleanup campaign, the aldermen voted to have the custodian wash the venetian blinds in the board's chambers.

Numerous requests for pay increases also were received by the aldermen and forwarded to the Finance Committee for further study.

The largest single request came from John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation Department. In a letter to the board he asked for a salary increase of $800 for next year. He is currently paid $6,892 a year.

Speaking for his department, Cioffredi also requested salary raises for his secretaries, full payment by the city for Blue Cross and Blue Shield, full payment of major medical insurance and full payment of the Pension Plan.

The Rutland County Vermont Municipal Employees listed similar requests for the next fiscal year. But, they also added a 25-cent increase per hour for every member, birthdays off with pay, and additional funds for the city dump employees. These amount to $10 a week more per man.

Asking for $10 a week raises in the Public Works Department were Erickson, Donald E. Foster, Gardiner F. Rice, Martin M. Notte, Claude I. Blongy, Ralph H. Rice requested an increase of $15.

City Clerk Henry P. Battles and City Treasurer W. Joseph Simonds asked the board to raise the salaries of their personnel by $10 a week also.

The firemen also presented the aldermen with their requests for next year. These fringe benefits included: a pay raise of $10 a week for each man; paid holidays for those currently enjoyed by the Public Works Department, being retroactive to July 1, 1963; the city pay hospitalization and pension premiums; and longevity pay of $5 a week for firemen with service of 25 years.

The most conservative request came from the Board of Assessors. Three men asked the board if they "could be considered for benefits" when the budget is submitted by Mayor Nichols.

Bike Registrations Are Extended for One Week

Another Session Will Be Held Saturday at Recreation Center Here.

City bicyclists will get one more chance to register their bikes.

Patrolman Russ Randlett said that a shortage of bicycle safety equipment in stores was the reason for the one-week extension of the bicycle registration deadline.

The Lawrence Recreation Center will again be the scene of the inspection Saturday from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Randlett said that at least 1,000 bicycles in Rutland still haven't been inspected and registered.

He said many bicyclists had complained that required safety equipment — bells, reflectors, lights — wasn't available in city stores, as a last-minute rush cleared the shelves.

But the equipment is now available, Randlett said, and one final registration period will be held Saturday to enable bicyclists to register.

The patrolman cautioned that Friday is the deadline for new plates. After Friday, bicycles without plates may not be operated on city streets.

"Those planning to register their bikes Saturday will either have to wheel them to the Recreation Center or have them loaded in a car," he said.

So far this year, 1,600 bicycles have been registered. The department's busiest day was Saturday, when 533 youngsters passed through the inspection facilities at the Recreation Center.

Pool Meeting Ordered Shut To Reporters

A meeting which may end in the spending of $50,000 of taxpayers' money will be barred to reporters Thursday.

Dr. Donald Icken, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce's swimming pool committee, said Wednesday night that he wouldn't allow members of the press to attend his committee's meeting.

The meeting will decide — maybe — if and how big Rutland's second swimming pool will be.

Any bond issue for the pool would run between $25,000 and $50,000, with the remainder of the cost paid by matching funds from the federal government and administered by the state.

"We'll tell you all about the meeting later," Icken said, "but we don't want a reporter there."

Icken said that some disputes existed between committee members and he wanted them ironed out before any news was released.

"But we'll gladly give you all sides of the story and all factions of the meeting," he said.

Asked why a reporter couldn't be present to get all the sides of the story firsthand, Icken replied:

"We don't want anything in print until we've settled it ourselves."

Icken said he and his committee wanted full cooperation from the press and spoke of a possible public-opinion poll through The Herald.

"We want to cooperate 100 per cent," he said. "We just don't want a reporter at the meeting."

The meeting is planned for noon at the Chamber office.

Pool Idea To Be 'Sold' to Public

Committee Opens Meeting, Decides to Push for Vote on Issue.

By KEN WILD

Rutland is going to get a proposal for a new swimming pool soon. Some definite course will be announced early in May.

The Chamber of Commerce committee working out the details met Thursday, and the meeting wasn't secret, after all. Committee spokesmen originally thought they'd like a non-reporter meeting, but changed their minds and said it was better to have all hands available at the meeting.

A vast amount of information will have to be conveyed to the public when the plans for the pool are finally set, and the committee felt constrained to include everybody in the discussion, although no definite plan of campaign has been worked out.

There was no "controversy" at the meeting.

In fact, there was unanimous opinion that Rutland needs a new pool.

The present one on North Main Street will be maintained as long as possible even when the new one opens, making it possible to serve the north and south ends of the city more easily and relieving crowding at the present old pool.

As to the size of the pool, the committee is still working out the figures, based on attendance at the present pool and the square footage that national recreation officials say is best for the handling of youngsters.

But they'll ask for a bigger pool than Rutland has at present.

As William Reardon, pool superintendent, told the committee:

"That present pool is just completely outgrown. 'We've had more than 400 kids in there at once — and how can you do a good job for the city with a mob scene like that?'"

The cost of the pool will be a sizeable chunk, but the committee felt it should put the "need" on the line for the whole city to contemplate, and let the voters decide if the need justifies the cost. The total cost still hasn't been decided.

All new agencies, service clubs and the Chamber itself will be enlisted for the campaign.

The proposal will probably be put to a vote in connection with the September primaries, although this date has not yet been made definite.

Dr. Donald Icken is chairman of the group mapping out the proposal, and the next discussion meeting — when something definite is expected — will be May 3.

Egg-citing!

Main Street Park —that's where the action is.

And the action Saturday morning is the Rutland Recreation Department's Easter Egg Hunt, scheduled for 10 a. m.

At that time, hordes of Rutland youngsters will turn the park topsy-turvy to find the 1,200 eggs cleverly hidden by John William (Uncle Wiggly) Cioffredi and his Recreation Department assistants.

The youngsters will be divided into three age groups — 3 to 4, 5 to 7, and 8 to 10 — and set loose into their own areas, assisted by teenage Easter Bunnies.

Cioffredi has promised prizes to the lucky children who find gold or silver eggs. A special prize awaits the enterprising youngster who finds the most eggs.

Cioffredi said as he wrapped the last of the eggs Friday that the affair should be finished by noon. He also cautioned egg-seekers to bring their own baskets but said that any eggs found may be kept.

"And any volunteer Bunnies who want to help out can check in with me at the park around 9:30 a. m.," he said.

John William Cioffredi of the Rutland Recreation Department does his best to control a crowd of hungry youngsters at the department's Easter Egg Hunt Saturday in Main Street Park. The kids outnumbered the eggs at least two to one.

Egg Hunt Not in the Spirit of Easter

Even 1,200 eggs weren't enough.

At least twice that many children converged on Main Street Park early Saturday morning for the Rutland Recreation Department's Easter Egg Hunt, and they weren't able to play by the rules.

John Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation Department, did his best to hold back the crowd until the eggs could be hidden by his three volunteer helpers. But older children, egged on by uncooperative adults, kept darting out to snatch eggs as they were hidden. The little kids never had much of a chance.

Finally Cioffredi called in the eggs and tried to start again. But again, older children snatched up the newly-planted eggs, leaving little or nothing for the smaller children.

Appeals to parents on the scene didn't do much good. One middle-aged woman was seen picking up as many eggs as she could cram into her coat pockets.

Two Rutland Jaycees, Frank Heald and Lou Hromek, came to the rescue with a fresh supply of candy for the smaller children, but the older children snatched up this candy while movie cameras from a television station filmed the scene.

But Cioffredi gamely gave out prizes to those few who found gold and silver Easter eggs and promised to try again next year.

"We wanted the little people to have fun," he said, "and this is what happens. Next year, it'll be strictly for the little people — and we'll have it at the Fairgrounds or the Country Club."

Cioffredi Says City Swimming Facility Can Be Repaired for $500, Opened by Memorial Day; Chamber Meets Tuesday on New One.

By ED STEVENS

Rutland youngsters have been guaranteed a place to swim this summer as Rutland's Recreation and Parks Department commissioner made plans Monday to have the municipal pool in shape by Memorial Day.

Meanwhile, the Chamber of Commerce pool committee made plans for a Tuesday meeting at which the committeemen hope to arrive at a decision concerning the proposed new city pool.

Committee Architect Ernest Erickson said that the study group would meet at noon "to try to come to an agreement on just what we want to do."

The committee is in hopes that the money for the new pool can be raised in a May bond issue. The committee hopes the state will provide matching funds.

Monday afternoon, John Cioffredi, commissioner of recreation and parks, and William Reardon, recreation coordinator, made an inspection of the present North Main Street bathing facility.

Cioffredi said that the pool could be made ready for the late May opening date.

"We'll need a little paint, and some caulking to fix up some of the cracks," he said. "But for the most part, the pool should be in good shape with a minimum of repair or cost."

Cioffredi said that Monday's inspection turned up no major leaks or other evidence of serious damage.

"Of course we don't know if it will hold water until we fill it up. But everything seems to be okay so I think it is safe to say that the pool will be opened by Memorial Day. One way or another, there will be swimming for Rutland youngsters," he said.

Although the pool is 36 years old, the commissioner said that the facility did not present safety hazards.

"We know the pool is old, but I don't want any parents to get worried, thinking that their child may be in some kind of danger," Cioffredi said.

"As far as I can see, there is no more danger now than 20 years ago," he said.

The commissioner said that the reason for recent concern over replacing the old pool was based on the fact that the facility was too small to handle the hundreds of youngsters who would wish to bathe.

Reardon, who also works as head life guard at the pool during the swimming season, said that on one day last summer, nearly 700 children had flooded the pool within an hour and a half.

The pool, which has an official capacity of 306 swimmers, has seen as many as 2,000 patrons on some sizzling summer days.

Reardon said that the greater number of swimmers in the water, the more difficult the life guards' task became. "We life guards are always on duty during swimming hours. No drownings have ever occurred in the municipal pool.

Cioffredi said: "I'll match my life guard staff against any other in the United States, but when the situation becomes as crowded as it does on some days, then it becomes more demanding on the guards."

The commissioner will see the pool open for its sixth time since he assumed the directorship of the Recreation and Parks Department. But he noted that the expected life of the pool was the biggest question in the minds of city officials.

Cioffredi said that the city would maintain the pool as long as maintenance costs did not exceed the practicality of continuing the facility's use.

This year's renovation costs are expected to be about $500. The commissioner said that in future years, department workers will have to replace several pieces of the pool's filter and possibly undertake other major renovation projects.

Erickson said that the chamber committee hopes to arrive at a set of plans Tuesday which can be applied to Rutland's need.

With state-provided funds for the project apparently out of reach, members of the committee have proposed a smaller pool which could be met more easily by city and state budgets.

The committee's project, which faces a number of serious roadblocks before their plans can be enacted, also faces Cioffredi who says he will accept only a maximum facility. Cioffredi's pool may cost near $140,000.

But Alderman John Mullen noted late Monday that city officials had a great deal of difficulty passing the present pool by voters back in the late 1920's.

"As I recall it, the issue was passed by only 11 votes," Mullen said.

Mullen said that a pool was a luxury for Rutland in 1929, "But now it is a necessity."

Burr & Burton Defeats Erring Bristol High, 6-5

Burr and Burton used a five-run third inning to outlast Bristol High, 6-5, in a non-league clash Thursday at West Rutland.

It was the fourth triumph of the season for the Bulldogs of coach Carl Rice against two losses, both to Class L Otter Valley. Bill Flory's Blue Bombers are now 7-2.

A triple by Phil Zandy which drove in one run was the longest blow for the Burr and Burton crew in their big inning. Bristol chipped in with three errors, while pitcher Aaron Hill, catcher John Paskiewicz and Dennis Edson had singles.

Trailing 6-3 going into the top of the seventh, Bristol staged a last ditch rally after two were out in an attempt to pull the game out of the loss column. Dick Ramsey singled, and Greg Orvis and Dick Wright followed with RBI doubles. However,

Burr and Burton reliever Jim Pecor got the final out on a pop-up which ended the threat.

Aaron Hill started for the Bull dogs and pitched into the sixth inning and picked up the win, striking out eight. Pecor finished up.

The two Burr and Burton pitchers were tough in the clutch as Bristol left 12 runners stranded, twice leaving the bases full.

Kn D'Avignon hurled the route for Bristol and took the loss. He allowed only five hits, but five errors committed by his supporting cast were costly. Burr and Burton played errorless ball.

Greg Orvis was the leading hitter in the game with a single and double in three trips.

The line score:

Bristol 002 001 2-5 7 5
Burr & Burton 015 000 x-6 5 0
D'Avignon and Filion; Hill, Pecor (6) and Paskiewicz.

Raider, Terrier Tracksters Meet Today in Bellows Falls

By JIM ICKEN
The Rutland High track team will take to the road once again Friday when Monk Martin's 1956 Raiders travel to Bellows Falls for a three-way meet scheduled for 3:30 p.m. with Al Fletcher's Bellows Falls trackmen and his spring's track club N. H.

When the Redmen take to the cinders at BF they will evidently have recollections of the first track meet of the season, which they lost to this same Terrier club, 67-64.

In that meet, both clubs were neck and neck coming down to the final event, the 880 relay.

The Terrier's Joey Waryas took a quick lead over Rutland's Mike Myers in the first leg of that relay and BF's Pat Walker held off a terrific effort by Rutland's Dick Brigham in the final leg to win the race and the meet.

At the field relays on April 22, the Redmen also took a second to the Terriers, despite the all-out efforts of junior Bob Byron, who took both the shotput and the discus events.

The following day, April 23, the Raiders once again followed the Bellows Falls boys at the Brattleboro track relays, this time, however, from a third position.

The Terriers tallied 48 points in the Brattleboro meet, Keene High of Keene, N.H., placed second with 36 points and Rutland compiled 20 to finish third.

Raiders Host Slaters

BY JIM FAWCETTE
Now that Rutland High's baseball field has been renovated, the Raiders will play their second game of the season on their home field, hosting Fair Haven here Friday at 4 p.m.

Rutland will enter the non-league clash a strong favorite, despite injuries to second-baseman Bob Sharp and short-stop Dave Lewis.

Lewis sustained an injury to his finger during pre-game practice Tuesday at Otter Valley and will be ready to fill-in despite impairment of his throwing.

Accidentally spiked while making a diving catch and tag at second, Sharp received a deep gash in his left forearm and, though capable of seeing some action, Bob will receive a well deserved respite.

Rutland, which displayed its depth against Otter Valley, will have sophomore Butch Paul move from center field to short

Recreation Program For Retarded Kids Will Begin Tuesday

The Rutland Recreation Department will inaugurate a summer recreation program for retarded children Tuesday morning at Havenwood School.

The program is part of the Recreation Department's attempts to give everyone in Rutland a chance for recreation, said John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation and Parks Department.

The program, which will run for five weeks starting Tuesday, is a pilot project with the department.

All parents who wish to send their retarded children to the recreation program may do so whether their children are regular pupils at Havenwood School or not.

The Havenwood School bus will make its regular school run in the morning to pick up children who wish to attend.

The recreation sessions will begin at 9 a.m. and end at 11:30. A special swim program from 11:45 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. is also planned.

Conducting the recreation sessions will be Miss Julie Frankiewicz and Mrs. Elizabeth Slayton.

Thursday activities are music games, songs, rhythm band, and word games.

Nighttime Is Fun Time For Recreation League Players

When the Little League teams left Rotary Field at 7:30 p.m. Monday, action wasn't over by a long shot.

The Recreation League was about to begin championship play.

The players took the field to the strains of march music, as the Rutland City Band, rehearsing a stirring version of "Men of Ohio," boomed away from the fieldhouse.

The players didn't run onto the field to the cheers of multitudes, though. They straggled on two or three at a time, and the first five there had to wait until a sixth brought a bat and some balls.

General Electric was pitted against the Greek-American Club in do-or-die action, although both sides fraternized freely before play began. "Got-a pitch before you take batting practice" cried one Greek-American player with a waistine bigger than his batting average.

The fields buffed after the fly balls while a handful of kids chased down the foul balls through the weeds.

A controversy arose when League Commissioner Tony Dolphin told one batter that his favorite bat had to be taped. After heated reference to the rule book by both sides, some tape was found and the bat was wound.

Battling practice turned into a scuffle of flying softball, although the only casualty was a mangy dog, which strayed onto the field and caught a hot liner on the snout.

Finally, John Cliffofedi arrived with the keys to the base locker. More important, he had the keys to the light poles, and darkness was coming on as fast as a Marty Cliffo fastball.

The usual round of oooohs and aahs came from the neighborhood kids as the lights turned the infield grass three shades lighter.

The bases were taken from the fieldhouse cellar while some onlookers dragged lawn chairs into box-seat position on the bluff overlooking the right-field foul line.

Players took last drags on their cigarettes and handed their wallets and watches to the few spectators scattered about the bleachers.

The band played on as the first Greek-American batter slapped a single through shortstop. Cliffofedi, the next batter, doubled and was promptly called out for leading too soon off second.

The game was on, and the wives and kids at home could wait. And if the players weren't exactly the calibre of Al Kaline, they at least looked like they were having more fun.

What's this we hear about Rutland's famous softball aggression, the perennial Palms powerhouse? Do the double-o-esses really have to bunt ponderous players like John Nottle and Hubie Pratt from second to third so they can score on triples? Is the Palms team overduoious average actually higher than the team batting average? Do stars like Bobby Kelly and Dokie Canney really pay attention to Bruce Wing's coaching at first — or does Bruce really coach at second? Is Norm Duby the best bench jockey in the Rutland area — kinda the Marble City's answer to Windsor's Carl Braun — and — Nottle's nickname actually "Nuttsey"? Sounds like a team we'd love to cover — play-by-play. One more question, men — what does double-o-esses stand for?

State Grants Pool Money But Sets Oct. 1 Limit

City Hopes to Get Cash Through Trust Fund of Mrs. F. E. White.

Rutland is going to attempt to get its matching money for a new swimming pool through the White Playground Fund.

City Atty. Arthur E. Crowley delivered an opinion to Mayor Harold Nichols Tuesday in which he said that the city has no legal objection to money being taken from the principal of the fund to pay for the pool.

Crowley also told the Mayor that the will of the late Mrs. Frances E. White provides for enlargements and additions to the playground.

The proposed $112,000 pool would be built at White Playground.

But the decision on the grant from the will must come from the Rutland County Bank, the trustees of the will.

Crowley said that he mailed a copy of his opinion to the bank Tuesday.

If the trustees agree to the proposal, the city would not have to vote a bond issue for the matching funds.

After the recent jump in the tax rate, chances for such a bond issue being passed before the Oct. 1 deadline set by the state seem slim.

The fund reportedly has enough principal remaining to easily pay for the pool.

The proposed pool would relieve overcrowding at the present North Main Street Pool, built in 1929.

Impetus for the second pool came from a special Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce committee headed by Dr. Donald Icken.

The committee decided to go ahead in May with plans for a bond issue campaign throughout the summer.

But a $394,000 school bond issue passed in May and an increased tax rate made the committee consider other means of raising the cash.

Icken voiced confidence that Rutland would get its pool when informed of the state grant Tuesday afternoon.

"That's a fine start," he said. "I have every reason to believe that we can get the other $60,000 from the fund," he added.

Committee Approves $49,721 Tuesday

(Vermont Press Bureau) MONTPELIER — The Interagency Committee on Natural Resources approved Tuesday $49,721 in matching federal funds for Rutland to build a new municipal swimming pool. However, the Interagency Committee, which is a state agency set up to distribute federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation funds, gave Rutland until Oct. 1, to raise the city's share of the matching funds.

Howard E. Jeffrey, state recreation director had urged the committee not to approve Rutland's request because he said the pool wasn't going to be built with reinforced concrete.

Jeffrey told the committee that he understands the city plans to use something other than concrete to build its pool and the "surface of the pool is going to be rough and abrasive and it wouldn't meet state laws which require smooth surface on pools."

The board overruled Jeffrey's recommendation after acting Forests and Parks Commissioner Robert Williams told the committee that it is getting "on dangerous ground when it starts to make value judgements on what kind of materials a city should use to build its pool." It was on the whole a bad day for Jeffrey as the committee overrode the recommendations of the Recreation Board and decided to allocate $15,300 for developing a marina on Perkins Pier in Burlington.

The board, through its chairman George McGregor of Burlington, argued that there were other projects more pressing.

However, the Interagency Committee felt otherwise after listening to Baxter Cummings of the Burlington Harbor Commission who detailed Burlington's need for the marina.

He was backed up by Richard G. Rollins, director of the Central Planning Office, who said that city plans as far back as 1952 envisioned a marina near Perkins Pier on Lake Champlain.

The vice-chairman of the Interagency Committee, Development Commissioner Elbert G. Moulton, said Lake Champlain is one of the state's greatest assets and a marina would be more than a recreation project. In other action the Interagency Committee approved Barre's request for $11,250 in BOR funds for matching purposes to improve its swimming pool.

The committee, as in the Rutland grant, stipulated that Barre has until Oct. 1 to raise the necessary matching money or the federal grant will be used for another municipal project. The city is now negotiating to buy about three - and - one-half acres of land near the municipal pool in the south end of the city.

The short, but sometimes turbulent meeting, Tuesday dealt solely with municipal recreation projects.

The committee has set aside $200,000 of its $1.62 million budget for municipal projects.

White Trustees Seek Legal Aid

Unnamed Local Attorney Asked to Weigh Gift to Municipal Swimming Pool Funds

By TOM SLAYTON

Trustees of White Playground Monday postponed deciding whether to spend roughly $50,000 to help build a municipal swimming pool there. The state Interagency Committee on Natural Resources approved $49,721 in matching funds for the proposed municipal pool last week.

However, to obtain the federal money, Rutland must match the grant by Oct. 1.

The White Playground trust fund, left under the control of the trustees of the Rutland County Bank by Mrs. Frances E. W. White, reportedly can easily supply the city's share of the proposed $112,000 pool.

Trustees of the bank — who also serve as the playground's trustees — referred the pool appropriation question to an unnamed local attorney at their regular Monday meeting.

City Atty. Arthur E. Crowley Jr. said recently that under the terms of Mrs. White's will, the city apparently could legally accept the trust money to build a pool at the playground.

The terms of the will allow, among other things, "development of the playground."

"Examining the applicable provision of the will, we find that Mrs. White directed that the playground be enlarged from time to time and provided that the sum in trust could be used for the enlargement, development, and improvement of the playground," Crowley wrote in a recent letter to city officials.

Crowley emphasized, however, that the trustees would have to make the final decision on using the playground trust fund.

A spokesman for the bank trustees said Monday that the trustees were aware of the city attorney's opinion, but wanted to check the legality with their own lawyer before appropriating money from the fund.

The proposal was referred to their lawyer at Monday's trustees meeting.

"It's too early yet for us to decide on this," the spokesman said, "but we'll probably know a lot more about it after our meeting next week."

The spokesman commented that a number of legal documents are involved in deciding whether the trust money can be spent for a pool at White Playground.

"There is a large legal question," he said.

If the trustees agree to appropriate the trust money for the pool, a bond issue for the matching funds would be unnecessary.

Observers feel that a bond question before Oct. 1 would most certainly fail, both because of the short time to prepare for it, and the recent tax hike announced by the Board of Aldermen.

The proposed pool would heround of the seventh and eighth relieve overcrowding at what grade summer hoop league tournament now the city's only municipality.

It has a capacity of 306, but on hot days has handled almost 2,000 swimmers, authorities say.

Dr. Donald Icken, who has spearheaded the drive for a new city swimming pool as head of a special Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce committee, recently expressed confidence that Rutland could get the necessary matching money from the trust fund.

Green Wave, Cosmos Hoop Semifinalists

The Cosmos and Green Wave came up with easy victories Tuesday in the Rutland summer high school basketball league tourney and will square off against each other Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Bob Rotella scored 16 points, and Alan Noble added 14 as the Wave trounced West Rutland, 55-39. The Green Wave was in front by 28-15 at the half.

Lou Zak and Lou Glodzik paced the losers with 14 points each.

Al Williams and Art Quimby led the well balanced Cosmos with nine points apiece as the Springfielders whacked Wallingford 44-25.

Gordie Day topped Wallingford as he scored 11 pointers. The Cosmos led at the half, 26-10.

Collegians, Cosmos Gain Hoop Finals

The Collegians and Cosmos will meet at 7:30 Thursday evening at White's courts with the summer high school basketball league title at stake.

The two teams scored impressive wins Wednesday night in scoring semifinal wins. The Collegians dumped the Red Raiders, 53-44, and the Cosmos erased the Green Wave, 67-53.

Brian Shortleeve connected for 16 points in the second half as the Collegians, leading by just 25-24, at intermission, rolled to their final nine point advantage, despite playing the last six minutes with only four hoopers.

Shortleeve was the game's top pointgetter with 26 tallies. But Morgan was second high man for the winners with nine points, while Ed Bove controlled the boards before fouling out.

Bill Minogue flipped in 13 counters for the Raiders and Barry Keefe added 10.

The Cosmos took a 33-21 half-time edge on the Green Wave and eased the rest of the way for the winner.

Stan Williams led the way with 19 points, followed by Mark Whalen with 14, Duff Lorinovich with 12 and Art Quimby with 10. Lorinovich was a tower of strength on the boards.

Bob Rotella paced the losers as he canned 16 markers. Bud McGinnis linked 14 and Mike Pallitte notched 10.

Bas-relief at the Vermont Marble Co. in Proctor is viewed by retarded children on a field trip sponsored by the Rutland

Herald photo—Slattery Recreation Department. The department has run a seven-week recreation program for the retarded children.

Experimental Recreation Program Termed Success

A pilot project to experiment in a new concept — city-sponsored recreation for retarded children — has proven highly successful in Rutland this summer. The Rutland Recreation Department is just winding up a seven-week summer program for retarded children at Havenwood School.

The program for retarded children is the first city-sponsored one run in the state of Vermont, according to Recreation Department officials.

"We believe that recreation is for all citizens," said John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of Recreation and Parks.

"A child's handicap should not deprive him of play experiences. In fact, retarded children probably need those experiences more than normal children."

The program, which will end a week from Friday, is designed to provide recreation opportunities for all retarded children in Rutland — with a little learning thrown in for good measure.

"What we're trying to do," said Mrs. Elizabeth Slayton, who, with Miss Julie Frankiewicz, helps run the summer program, "is give these kids the opportunity to make good use of their own free time."

Physical fitness exercises, directed by Miss Frankiewicz, have helped to increase the coordination of the children participating in the program.

"It's impossible to teach games like softball if the child has no basic muscle coordination," Mrs. Slayton explained.

"But now we've seen some of the kids practice the new games they've learned on their own. Their coordination has improved tremendously over the summer."

Sports have been only one of the activities offered the retarded children.

Word games and storytelling exercises to improve communication, arts and crafts, and drawing and painting to develop manual skills, and music and rhythm games to help timing and coordination have all played a part in the program.

A weekly swimming program and special activities such as field trips to local industries and other points of interest have also added to the recreation project, which runs weekday mornings in Havenwood School.

"Social adjustment, working with others, taking directions—in general, being a part of the community — have been important skills for these children to develop," Cioffredi said.

He summed up: "Through play these children learn to associate with the other people they will eventually be living with."

Cioffredi said he hopes the project can be continued, and possibly expanded, next year.

"We're greatly impressed with our results," he said, adding that he and other city officials are beating the federal grant office bushes, hoping to obtain some federal financial assistance for next summer's program.

"We'd like to be able to expand the program and be able to bring in crippled children and more retarded kids," Cioffredi said.

"We'd like to be able to reach every person in Rutland in some form or other," Cioffredi said.

The scramble is on as Rutland's Jackie Rogers (left) and Cosmos' Parry Williams go for basketball Thursday night in summer hoop league title tilt at Lawrence gym. Cosmos won contest, 97-50, and Williams was one of the big guns for the Springfield five.

Cosmos Beat Collegians, 97-80 for Hoop Title

The hustling Cosmos, an aggregation of Springfield High hoop talent, pressed their way to the championship of the High School Recreation League Thursday night at the Lawrence Gym with a 97-80 triumph over the Collegians.

The winners led all the way, usually by six or eight points, before bouncing away in the final four minutes of the game.

The Cosmos employed a half-court press in the first half, but then defended all over the court in the second half and simply outran their more experienced opponents.

Charlie Quimby and Bob Kenyon snapped the cords from inside, while Barry Williams

25-feet out to keep the Collegians from collapsing into the middle. Duff Lorinovich and Pete Yan-offsky joined Williams, Quimby and Kenyon in double figure for a well-rounded scoring tack. Williams, who topped scores with 23 points, peppered the strings in the last four a half minutes to enable Cosmos to pull from a tidy 80-advantage to their final 17-point edge.

Kenyon, a key operator more ways than one, chipped with 19 tallies, while Quimby led 17. Lorinovich had 12. Yanofsky 11.

Brian Shortleeve paced losers as he notched 19 points while Butch Morgan and R. Eaton each got 15.

Court to Rule On Pool Funds

Would Be Released Through Chancery

By TOM SLAYTON

Rutland will have to go to Chancery Court if it hopes to obtain $56,000 from the White Playground Trust Fund for matching money to provide a new municipal swimming pool. Trustees of the Rutland County Bank, who control the trust fund, said Tuesday that they would like to release the money to build a swimming pool at White Playground. But, they said, they cannot do so under the present terms of the trust agreement.

The trustees said they would cooperate with the city to release the funds through Rutland Chancery Court action.

Acting on an opinion by the bank's lawyer, Atty. Vernon J. Loveland, the bank trustees made their statements in a letter to Rutland Mayor Harold J. Nichols Tuesday.

A conflict between the will of the late Mrs. Frances E. W. White, and her trust agreement with the bank necessitates resorting to court action.

The Vermont Interagency Committee on Natural Resources approved $49 in federal funds for the municipal swimming pool two weeks ago, but said that Rutland must put up its share of the pool money before Oct. 1.

The will-trust agreement conflict is, in a nutshell:

... Mrs. White's will states that the trust fund may be used "for the enlargement, development, and improvement of such playground, and for the maintenance and operation of same."

... However, the bank's trust agreement — by which the bank trustees must abide — says the trust money may be spent "for the repair and maintenance of the playground established in accordance with the provisions of the will of Frances E. W. White."

... The bank's trust agreement, since it makes no specific mention of improvements or developments at the playground, prevents the trustees from releasing the trust money for the swimming pool, Atty. Loveland said.

"Your duties and rights arise from the trust agreement, not the will," Loveland said in a letter to the trustees.

The lawyer noted, however, that Mrs. White's will did provide for improvements as well as maintenance, and said:

"It would seem the proper procedure might be for the city to apply for a court order reforming or correcting the trust agreement to accord with the provisions of the will."

"We would be happy to cooperate with the city in such a procedure," the trustees' letter to Mayor Nichols said, "and (we) believe if an action were promptly instituted that a decree, hopefully in favor of the city, could be obtained within a few weeks."

An earlier opinion by City Atty. Arthur E. Crowley Jr. held that the city could legally accept the trust money, but that it would be entirely up to the bank's trustees to release the $56,000.

Crowley said he would report on the entire swimming pool matter at the next meeting of the Rutland Board of Aldermen, to bring them up to date on the project.

The trust money has been seen as the only feasible way Rutland can possibly raise the matching funds needed to keep the federal grant.

Observers feel that a bond issue would almost certainly fail, even if a special election could be held before Oct. 1, since the city tax bills were mailed recently, and caused some dissatisfaction among city property owners.

Budget increases, both in the city school department, and in the city's own operating budget, made a tax hike necessary.

The new pool, if it can be built, would help relieve overcrowding at the present city swimming pool on North Main Street. That pool now handles many more swimmers than it was designed for when built in 1926.

The drive for the new municipal pool at White Playground has been spearheaded by a special Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce committee headed by Dr. Donald Ickon.

Officials say the pool would be built of reinforced concrete and would measure 164 by 44 feet.

Cioffredi to Enforce Ban on Dances

There will be no more teenage block dances until specific permission is given by the Rutland Board of Aldermen.

Rutland Recreation and Parks Superintendent John W. Cioffredi, commenting on a ban of the dances at White Playground voted by the aldermen Monday night, said:

"Until the Board of Aldermen authorizes me to conduct block dances, we will discontinue them."

The board enforced the ban on dances at White's Playground after several city residents near the playground entered a petition at the board's Monday night meeting.

The anti-dance petition claimed teen-agers at the dance were "deplorable" because they swore, drove over private lawns adjacent to the playground, and turned their cars around in area residents' "private driveways".

Even as he ruled the block dances out until the aldermen rule them back in, Cioffredi said it's a shame the dances have to go.

"For some of the kids, it's something they look forward to all week," Cioffredi said. "Many of them don't have cars, and have no place else to go."

The Recreation chief said emphatically:

"There's nothing wrong with the dances. I feel that any time we can keep several hundred kids off the highways, we're doing our job."

He added, however, that parking has always been a problem at White Playground.

Concerning his ban on the dances, Cioffredi said:

"I have my instructions from the aldermen and I will follow them."

In the meantime, Rutland's teenagers reacted sharply to the block dance ban.

"That's just great" one lad said pointedly. "Now there's just one more excuse for sneaking over the line."

"Over the line", of course, refers to New York State, where a drinking age of 18, compared with Vermont's 21, has brought on heavy interstate migration, particularly late at night.

Study of City Farm As Athletic Field Due

Bennington Consultant Hired to Survey Last Open Property.

By MARSHA FELDMAN

Within two weeks, the city should know if the Woodstock Avenue city farm is a good site for an athletic field.

Superintendent of Schools, William A. Atkins said Wednesday a Bennington firm, the Allen Park and Recreation Planners, will undertake a study of the city-owned land in the northeast section of Rutland to determine its possible use as a sports facility.

The Board of Aldermen has avoided taking action of the land, 22 acres of which is on the north side of Woodstock Avenue and 17 acres of which is on the south side, although it has its own ideas as to the disposal of part of it.

During 1965, an aldermanic committee proposed that the land on the north side be split into 26 building lots and sold, either to private individuals or to a single builder for a housing development.

However, the proposal met opposition from both city and recreation officials. A number of individual citizens urged the transformation of the area into an athletic complex.

Both sides argued for the 22 acres on the north side of the avenue, the aldermen because the location was more desirable than the one across the street which is adjacent to the dump, the school and recreation group because the area on the south side was too small.

Atkins said that he and Allen will look at the site Thursday and that after Allen has studied the area he will submit a proposal, which Atkins in turn will submit to the Board.

Both sides of the avenue will be studied, Atkins said.

Originally, John Cloutier, head of the Recreation Department, had suggested that the Bennington planning outfit study the city farm and submit a plan for the area. But his idea was turned down by the aldermen.

Atkins was given the green light by the aldermen after several weeks of indecision during which they received a petition signed by 247 area residents throughout the city urging the area be used for recreational purposes.

The petition presented to the board in April, stated that the land is "probably the last area or city owned land available for public use in the northeast section of the city."

The petitioners who live in all sections of the city, told the board they wanted a referendum either during a regular election or in a special election, if the board decided to sell the land.

John S. Maslack of 123 Harrington Ave., who helped to spearhead the petition, told the board at that time: "The people own this property and they should have an opportunity to vote on it."

The land in question is the location of a farm house which was used to house the poor.

As many as 50 persons lived in the house and farmed the land as recently as 10 years ago, but only seven were there when the place was closed in July.

An aldermanic committee studied the property and decided it was too costly to keep open. They recommended that the building be torn down and that the land on the north side be sold to add money to the city coffers.

Those in opposition to this plan feel that no amount of money is worth the sale of the last piece of land available for a city athletic field.

76ers Defeat Pistons In Hoop Finals

The 76ers, sparked by Mike Derosa who did everything but take tickets, came from behind in the second half and defeated the Pistons, 71-66, in the finals of the seventh and eighth grade summer hoop league basketball tourney.

Derosa scored 47 points in the game and also found time to grab off a slew of rebounds and lead the 76ers floor game.

The Pistons, with a well balanced attack, moved to a 37-31 edge by halftime, however, it failed to stand up.

Bob McMahon paced the losers with 24 points, while Tom Shortle moved in with 19. John Kelly chipped the ball well for the Pistons.

NOT FOR BAN

To the Editor: Yes, I was a signer of the petition by the residents of Ave. B. However, I was misled. I believed I was petitioning for:

1. more grassed-over areas
2. better lighting
3. better parking facilities
4. stricter patrolling

All of these would be beneficial to the residents of Ave. B as well as to those who come to the White Playground. I had no idea I was petitioning to ban the dances.

We have never been bothered by glass, cans, papers or tire marks on the lawn. I have not heard the foul language.

In my opinion, it is time someone wrote an article praising the thousands of teenagers who spend their summers working, playing in city bands, helping out in hospitals, etc., and their school year.

POOR PLANNING

To the Editor: In order to clarify our position concerning the ban on White playground block dances, no teenager has been labeled as deplorable. Only the situation. They go where they are sent. This is a thickly settled small residential area with no room for 600 teenagers to arrive in cars. No one said that there is anything wrong with teen dances; it's the management.

Teen Dancers Invited to GE Parking Lot

The city recreation department was told Thursday it can schedule its block dances in the parking lot at the General Electric Co. on Columbian Avenue.

John Cioffredi, city recreation director, said that the offer was made by J. Walter Herlihy, general manager of the G. E. plant.

The block dances, which attract about 600 young persons weekly, were transferred to White Playground from the Depot Parking Lot, which is being renovated to accommodate parking for the new shopping center.

Then the dances were banned by the Board of Aldermen Monday night after stormy protest by neighbors of the playground, who complained that the dancers were rowdy and leaving a mess for area residents to clean up.

According to Cioffredi, Herlihy said that lighting for the dances can be arranged in either the upper or lower parking lots at the G. E. plant.

Cioffredi said he would investigate both areas and decide soon whether to schedule the dances there.

The board acted to put a stop to the dances after a petition was received from several residents of Avenues B and C, which border the playground.

The petition read, in part: "They park up and down our streets . . . drive on our lawns and use our private driveways for turning. Broken glass and debris are strewn around and left for us to clean up. The language is repulsive."

Cioffredi said, on hearing of the aldermen's decision that he was surprised because, "I never received one call from anyone complaining about the dances."

He added that the police who oversee the dances have never complained about the behavior of those in attendance, nor had the police department ever received a complaint from one of the neighbors about a disturbance.

order, but perhaps they like it. I do not condone maltreatment of others' property nor defacement by litterbugs but I do think that this situation has been handled with the least amount of diplomacy and democracy. A word to the mighty Aldermen and a few people can cut off a most worthwhile project of the recreation department without a backward glance. There certainly wasn't a glance to the future of these kids' either. Democracy just isn't for the kids of Rutland. It's easier for the adults and lawmakers that way. No warning nor second chance was given nor is the proof of the many allegations clear to me.

I wonder what would have happened if the kids had been nicely asked to refrain from littering, especially about the fringe areas of the playground and to be more careful of their driving and parking. We will probably never know but it is my guess that these kids are not "unappreciative" nor "infant" but rather a nice bunch of kids who at times are a bit slap-happy, forgetful, excited and any other adjective which describes ourselves — the adults of this city — when we were kids.

NO LONGER A KID
Rutland

WHEN YOUTH HAS GONE . . .

To the Editor: When homes are broken into, stealing and damaging occur, and bloody and broken bodies are taken into the hospital from racing autos, the old familiar cry comes from the learned adults of the city. We've all heard it and most of us have said it at one time or others — "If there was only something for the kids to do to keep them busy, etc. etc. — BUT — keep them away from our doors.

I think the only answer for our kids is to farm them out to the country and pretend that they are someone else's responsibility until they are old enough to come back and be selfish adults.

Do these responsible, complaining citizens ask the permission of the Aldermen to have a backyard party which lasts until 2 or 3 a.m. and is by no means quiet and the cans and bottles which decorate the lawn are not always soda pop, and let's not forget the language. Perhaps one or two of the Aldermen are invited to these parties. I wonder how many have attended one of the recreation dances before condemning them on the word of a few "irate citizens" who appear to me to be starting a long range campaign to keep the proposed new swimming pool out of their neighborhood also.

Perhaps at this point it might be food for thought to interject a word from Dan Webster who says in his high school level dictionary that an irate person is wrathful, and a wrathful act is done for punishment and with vengeance. — An apt name one Avenue B resident dubbed himself.

I have two teenagers who attend the dances regularly. I spend an hour each week observing the kids having a wonderful time before it is time to transport them home, and I can say that I have never seen nor heard anything comparable to the terrors of the night described by "irate". The playground has been policed very adequately as was the depot parking lot and I am sure the local police would have recommended cancellation of the dances if they had seen and heard so much dis-

MUCH TO ASK FOR

To the Editor: It seems very strange and indeed ironic that the Aldermen have banned the Recreation Department dances at White Playground. It was approximately eight months ago that area adults were quite alarmed because the city's teenagers were going to other dances rather than those at the Recreation Center. At that time we were unappreciative, now we are irresponsible.

Tuesday's Herald reported that a group of adults from the playground area had complained that the teenagers were parking "on our streets" (which happen to be public). Other reasons cited were "the language is repulsive" and "they turn around in our private driveways". Perhaps the aldermen should also halt the adult softball games, for in the course of a week the before mentioned instances certainly occur after softball games. In the same respect, perhaps all activities should be scrapped in this area. Certainly a pool can never be erected here because the same group would complain again with the same "visibly shaken" attitude. Of course the abandonment of the activities at Whites is ridiculous, but what if the residents suddenly decided that it isn't? Would the Board of Aldermen end the softball games as readily as they did the dances?

Our country is not run on a democratic system, but a representative system. Democracy is rule by all the people. A representative government is run by representatives obviously. Pure democracy would indeed be highly impractical and would become "mob-ocracy". What if the 600 teenagers who used to go to dances suddenly decided to go to an Aldermanic meeting to complain because they had nothing to occupy their time? Perhaps there should be a teen council in Rutland. Certainly it would give youngsters a chance to defend themselves from having their legs pulled from under them by something against which they are defenseless.

Because most of the city's people are indifferent towards things of this nature, and those who are outspoken are not exactly with the teenage set, the youth of Rutland will probably never have a voice in what they do or don't do. This is the birth of the great lack of civic-mindedness our area seems to be burdened with.

Perhaps three hours a week is a great deal to ask for.

Get Out Your Dancing Shoes

Aldermen Will Probably Bring Back Playground Dances at Meeting.

BY MARSHA FELDMAN

A reversal of the aldermanic ban on block dances at White Playground is expected at Monday night's meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

The Board voted last Monday to meet this week to study the city ordinances, but they allotted a maximum of 30 minutes for regular business which they did not have time to complete at last week's meeting.

During the half hour, the aldermen will probably reinstate dancing at the playground, an activity which was banned last Monday after complaints by a group of citizens who reside on Avenue B and C, which border the playground.

The citizens' represented by P. Baxter Perry, William H. Goldman, and Vernon Bliss, met with two aldermanic committees, the Chief of Police, and the head of the Recreation Department Friday night in an effort to iron out complaints about noise and maintenance at the playground area.

Their grievances were listed in a petition to the Board last Monday night and the complaints resulted in the vote which stopped dances at the playground.

The dances were moved to the playground from Depot parking lot two weeks ago when construction at the parking lot made it difficult to hold the dances there.

The citizens committee emphasized Friday night that it had no intention of halting the dances, an issue which caused considerable controversy and resulted in several letters to the editor of The Herald. Several anonymous telephone calls were reportedly made to some of the petitioners.

Perry, spokesman for the group, stressed that the dances were "just the straw that broke the camel's back," and referred the group to a list of eight specific proposals which he said the residents wanted implemented.

The three agreed that they would not object to having the remainder of this season's block dances held at the playground if a large enough light is used and if parking is permitted on the softball field.

Other items expected to come before the Board in the 30 minutes are reports from City Atty. Arthur E. Crowley Jr. on the pool and cable television.

The city attorney will probably bring the aldermen up to date on the status of funds being sought from the trust fund of Frances E. White. Federal funds totaling almost $30,000 must be matched locally by Oct. 1.

The funds were requested from the Rutland County Bank, trustees of the ill, who informed the aldermen that the Chancery Court would have to release the money.

A report on whether the Rutland Cable TV Co. is obligated to service all homes in the city is also expected to be made by Crowley. The report was requested by Alderman Howard Douglas, who said he received complaints from residents of certain new streets who were having trouble obtaining a cable for television reception.

Crowley has been searching the city records to find out if a contract exists which binds the cable company to service, exists.

Reach Accord On Teenage Block Dances

They shook hands and came out smiling, but it wasn't easy.

After a stormy start, the residents of the White Playground area decided the city of Rutland Recreation Department was aware of problems there and was only too willing to do something about them.

The scene was the council chamber at City Hall, where a meeting of the Board of Aldermen's police and recreation committees was underway Friday night to clarify the grievances of the residents of the playground area who had presented a petition to the board Monday night.

One of the complaints in the petition concerned block dances, two of which have been held at the playground. The dances were moved to the playground from the Depot Parking Lot, which is being remodeled to accommodate parking for the new shopping center. On hearing the complaints and receiving the petition, the board banned further dances at White's.

The aldermanic committees, composed of Aldermen Ethel Stearns, Daniel Allen, John Hansen, John Mullen, Richard Burke and Robert Harrison, were joined by three residents of the playground area, three teenagers, the chief of police, and the superintendent of the recreation department.

P. Baxter Perry of 6 Avenue B, one of the originators of the petition, was the spokesman for the resident's committee, whose members included Vernon Bliss of 49 Avenue C and William Goldman of 12 Avenue B.

Perry insisted that the group not discuss the block dances, which, he claimed, were not a complaint of the residents.

He repeatedly said, "This has nothing to do with the block dances. They were just the straw that broke the camel's back. I was very surprised when the board decided to stop the dances."

He was reprimanded by Alderman Stearns when he tried to prevent John Cioffredi, head of the recreation department, from speaking on the dances.

"I suggest we hold our tempers," Mrs. Stearns told him.

The petition specifically named the block dances as one source of trouble in that area of the city. One paragraph descriptively listed the noise, abusive language, and automobile traffic as dance problems.

Perry presented the group with a list of improvements the residents of the area had agreed were necessary at the Playground, and it was this list that became the basis for the discussion — after the block dance issue subsided.

The final outcome on the block dances probably will be decided at Monday night's Board of Aldermen meeting, when the two committees, at the request of the group which met Friday night, ask that the dances be reinstated at the playground.

The residents agreed that adequate lighting in the area, and parking on the softball diamond could eliminate some of this problem.

City Swim Championships Planned by Recreation Dept

Next Wednesday is the day for the Rutland Recreation Department's 1966 "City Swimming Championships" for the city's youth.

Bill Reardon, head lifeguard at the municipal pool, said there will be medals for all winners and a trophy for the outstanding swimmer. The events will start at 1:30 p.m.

The three events are: Boys and girls, ages 9-12 (polywogs) 125 yards, 2. free style. 3. back stroke. 4. breast stroke. 5. kick board. 6. diving.

Boys and girls, ages 13-16 (juniors) 1. 40 yards; 2. free style; 3. back stroke; 4. breast stroke;

5. butterfly; 6. diving.

Ages 17 and over (seniors) 1. 80 yards; 2. free style; 3. back stroke; 4. breast stroke; 5. butterfly; 6. diving.

Reardon said applications must be in no later than Tuesday. The applications may be picked up at the swimming pool.

Rutland Historical Society Castleton Jug Band Makes Television Debut Sunday

By MERLE JACKSON

Vermonters will be viewing local talent this Sunday on national television, starting at 5:30 p.m. when the Plunkouts, a Castleton College-based jug band, appear on the Ted Mack Original Amateur Hour.

An estimated 12 million persons watch the show every week. The Plunkouts won a talent show sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department here last April. They won a chance to audition for the television show by winning.

Five youths, John and Martin Tewksbury of Randolph; Bernie Soubble of Chester Depot; Terry Diers of Sharon and Phil Turner of North Bennington, make up the group.

The CBS program is carried locally by WCAX-TV (Channel 3) and WTEN-TV (Channel 10). John and Martin, Rutland Recreation Department chief, wished them well Friday saying, "I would like to wish them the best of luck and to congratulate them on being selected for the show."

The group recently went to New York City to tape their act, which features the selection, "I'm Satisfied With My Gal." The group is organized as follows: Martin Tewksbury, wash tub bass; John Tewksbury, banjo; Diers, wash tub and kazoo; Soubble, guitar; and Turner, harmonica. They were organized last February and have won several contests since then in talent shows.

The boys received their name from the father of the Tewksbury boys. They reportedly plan to continue to play "for fun," even if they are not winners on the Mack program.

Ellsworths Tewksbury of Randolph, father of the Tewksbury boys, said Friday, "They have done real well. They have won quite a few contests." He said the boys write much of their material.

The band, which has a loyal following, also has its critics. Following their appearance here last April, several persons expressed their feelings in letters to the Editor of The Herald.

One West Rutlander wrote "Are you kidding?" and finished the letter, saying "some of the acts in the show were really great and much more deserving. It was really a shame because all the people who spent so much time working to make it a success have really been let down."

A Plunkout fan from Castleton State College countered saying "I firmly believe the judges' choice of the Plunkouts for first place was not merely a good choice. It was superb."

The winners of the Ted Mack show will be decided by view by post card balloting. Terry Diers said of the approximately 450 acts which tryout each year for Mack, only nine appear in the show.

He said an average of 100 people vote on the acts. All Martin Tewksbury are now Castleton State College students. He graduated last June.

Diers said he will be watching the show from Illinois.

AFTERMATH

To the Editor: How lovely to wake up the morning after the night before and find our front lawn littered with soda cans! Further search reveals that the neighbors weren't slightest either. The street has blossomed with candy wrappers, pop bottles and cans, not to mention the tire tracks on the lawns. And how did this all come about? Well, let me explain.

On the night before, the beautiful sound of voices broke through the darkness. Then the autos went racing down the street blowing the horns at figures walking in the dusk. Foul language passed from the walking figures to the passengers of the vehicles. All of this because the City provides a weekly dance for unappreciative kids.

This is not the best representation of our local teenagers. I know that there are many swell kids in this city — so why should these few rowdies be provided with entertainment and be allowed to abuse the privilege while the general run of kids won't even go to these dances?

It is my opinion that a few of these loose-mouthed roughnecks ought to get treated for what they really are, INFANTS. It is evident that they have had no upbringing so a few grown-ups should take a firm hand and do something about it, as long as parents have neg-

Playground Block Dances Will Resume

Weather permitting, there will be a dance at White Playground Tuesday night.

Insisting that their ban was not a ban, the Board of Aldermen reversed a decision made a week ago Monday to stop dances at the playground.

Notified of the board's decision, John Cioffredi, superintendent of the recreation department, said the dance would run from 8 to 10 p.m.

"I am happy to hear that the board reverse its previous decision and I'm sure the youngsters appreciate this. I hope they are all aware of the situation and conduct themselves in a manner in which we can all be proud," Cioffredi said.

The board reinstated the dances for the remainder of the season, but only if adequate lighting is provided. They also stipulated that during the dance hours one-way traffic would be permitted on Avenues B and C near the playground. Parking will be allowed only on one side of both streets.

Cioffredi urged those planning to attend the dance not to bring automobiles if possible. Parking will be opened in the softball field only if necessary, he said.

The board stopped dances at the playground after complaints by a group of residents of the area were received. The residents okayed the dances if adequate lighting and parking facilities were made.

Stanley Family Takes Honors In Swim Meet

Fifteen-year-old Patty Stanley capped a day of glory for the William F. Stanley family of 41 Temple St. Wednesday when she was named the outstanding swimmer at the Rutland City Swimming Championships.

Patty led the Stanleys to 12 first places in the fifth annual swim event. She won only one race Wednesday, clipping two seconds off the pool record of 58 seconds in the senior women's freestyle, but has been a consistent swimmer all season.

Besides Miss Stanley's record, five other marks fell. Andy Guyette took a tenth of a second off his own midge freestyle record of 15.8. Nan Bliss won the junior freestyle in 22.5, another record.

Robert Van Buskirk raced through the junior men's freestyle in record time of 21.5. Sue Dow broke the existing mark of 34.7 in the junior breaststroke by 2.3 seconds, and brother Jack won the men's breaststroke in 28.2, another mark.

Other winners were David Phelps, 8-and-under freestyle; Lisa Baker, girls 9-12 freestyle and breaststroke; Paula Stanley, girls 9-12 backstroke and butterfly; Kevin Stanley, boys' 9-12 backstroke and breaststroke; Mark Stanley, seniors freestyle and breaststroke; Diane Johnson, 13-16 backstroke; Peggy Smith, 13-16 backstroke; Andy Guyette, butterfly; Jack Dow, butterfly, and Nan Bliss, butterfly.

Paula Stanley won the girls total events in the 9-12 bracket, while sister Patty was first in the girls 13-16 range. Mark Stanley, their brother, was the top point collector in the 13-16 boys' group. Steve Dow kept the Stanleys from a sweep by finishing first in the boys 9-12 division. A total of 54 swimmers and divers entered the meet.

Court's Role In Swim Pool Issue Vital

By MARSHA FELDMAN

The Board of Aldermen was told Monday night that the trust agreement drawn between the city, executors, and trustees of the will of Frances E.W. White may unnecessarily — and perhaps unjustly — restrict the use of the money Mrs. White left to the City of Rutland.

It is under this supposition that the city will want if it takes its case to the Rutland Chancery Court for a release of $56,000 for the construction of the new swimming pool.

During a scheduled 1 hour meeting which quickly stretched into an hour and a half, the aldermen heard a report from City Atty. Arthur E. Cwley Jr. and unanimously voted that he review the minutes of aldermanic meetings held since the trust agreement was drawn up to determine if it is carried out the terms of White's will.

The city is attempting match by Oct. 1 a $50,000 federal grant for a new municipal swimming pool to be located White Playground.

The money is being sought from the Rutland County Bank trustees of Mrs. White's will rather than from the city coffers. The latter action would have to be voted on in a special election and, with property tax bills freshly in their hands, the voters almost certainly would defeat the issue.

Crowley reviewed with the board the letter he sent the bank, stating that in his opinion Mrs. White's will permitted expenditures on improvements which would allow the release of money for the swimming pool.

However, the bank replied in a letter through Atty. Vernon J. Loveland, that the trust agreement makes no stipulations for improvements, only repairs and maintenance.

Loveland also stated that the bank is bound by the trust agreement, not the will. He said the court would have to release the money. The trustees could not.

The trust agreement was drawn up in 1958 between the city, R. Clark Smith and Christopher A. Webber, executors of the will; and the bank, and it is the minutes of the meetings during which negotiations were going on that Crowley will inspect.

Crowley suggested the possibility that the city attempt to obtain a Chancery Court order which would "reform the trust agreement to conform with the will" and, thereby, permit the release of funds.

On a motion by Aldermen Howard Douglas, Crowley will inspect the 1958 records. The motion was amended by Alderman John Hansen to direct Crowley to find out if it was the intent of the board to limit the will and "to determine whether or not the aldermen were acting lawfully, under the direction of the executors, in so (limiting) in spite of the intent of Mrs. White in her will."

A second motion by Douglas directed Mayor Harold J. Nichols to contact the Vermont Interagency Committee on Natural Resources, the agency through which the pool funds were allocated, to request that the Oct. 1 deadline on matching funds be extended until the legal problems are solved.

NEVER FAILS!

To the Editor: It never fails — always teenagers!

I'm sure the residents of Ave. B have been on Pleasant Street when the Elks Club throws one of their "shindigs". I cannot recall anyone making much comment about all of the little "irks" that arise from these adult dances! Cars have been scrapped, and some very seriously, without a word from the so-called adult offenders.

And I can bet that these same individuals are the ones that walk their dogs along neighbors lawns! (And much prefer dogs to any age kid).

I live on a corner where teenagers pass daily in groups, sometimes being litterbugs. So what? What about the teenagers that are cluttering-up the greenery of Viet Nam?

If only we grown-ups would be patient and consider this age, I'm sure they will become responsible adult citizens real soon.

Nichols Appeals Pool Deadline

Asks State for Time to Work on Legal Hassle Over Trust Fund.

By MARSHA FELDMAN
Mayor Harold J. Nichols Thursday asked the Vermont Interagency Committee on Natural Resources to extend the Oct. 1 deadline for matching funds for the proposed new swimming pool.

In a letter to Howard Jeffrey state director of recreation, the mayor explained that "there is a legal question" about whether or not the money can be obtained from the trust fund of the will of Frances E. W. White whose name is born by the playground at which the pool would be located.

The Interagency Committee approved Aug. 3 almost $50,000 in federal funds for the Rutland pool. The committee, however, stipulated that the matching funds would have to be raised by Oct. 1.

An attempt by the city to have the money released from the trust which guards Mrs. White's endowment may result in court action. The legal maneuvering would probably not be completed by the deadline. In his letter, the mayor requested that the deadline be extended to Dec. 1.

"We expect that the legal question will be answered before that date and the matter will have been presented to the voters of the City of Rutland, if this is deemed necessary," Mayor Nichols told Jeffrey.

If court action does not allow the city the use of the money, the issue will be placed before the voters for a bond issue.

The amount needed is $56,000. Every year, the city needs about $3,000 from the interest on the $80,000 Mrs. White left to the city. The money is invested in stocks.

After the state agency joked the federal funds for the pool, the city asked the Rutland County Bank, trustees of Mrs. White's will, to release the matching funds.

In a letter to the bank, Atty. Arthur E. Crowley Jr. pressed the opinion that banks could release the money according to the terms of White's will.

The will states that the money may be used "for enlargement, development, and improvement of such playground, and maintenance and operation of the same."

The bank sought the advice of its own lawyer and to the city through Atty. J. Loveland that the agreement—drawn up between the city, the executors of the will, and the bank—was by which the bank provides for "the maintenance of the established in accordance with the provisions of Frances E. W. White's will."

not call for either development or ground, words which are contained in the will. Loveland suggested that the city apply to the Rutland Chancery Court for a court order to make the trust agreement conform with the provisions of the will.

The same suggestion was proposed to the Board of Aldermen by Crowley, who was then directed by board members to inspect the minutes of the meetings of the aldermen in 1958 when the trust was being drawn up to determine if the city went against the intent of Mrs. White's will.

Crowley, who has begun to search the old files, said Thursday he would have a report to make to the board when it meets Sept. 6.

Dance Tonight

With the "Teen Age - White Playground Block Dance Controversy" apparently ended, local teens will dance again there for the second time Tuesday from 8 to 10 p.m.

Mike Sinclair of WHWB will again preside over the musical treat. Recently adults in the area of Avenue B and Avenue C complained about noise and teen activity at White Playground. The streets border the playground.

The dispute finally was brought before the Board of Aldermen who first suspended the dances and later dropped their ban after assurances were made no more trouble would develop.

Square Dance

Rutland teenage square dance fans will swing to the music of "King of the Road" and "Marching Through Georgia" and other selections Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center.

Erwin E. West Jr. will call the program. It is sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department.

Swimming At Pool Limited To Afternoon

With swimming lessons at the Rutland Municipal Pool ended for the season, the pool will be closed mornings this week, according to the Rutland Recreation Department.

The pool, however, will be open for general swimming starting at 1 p.m.

In addition, Miss Betty Mumford, department spokesman, said all swimmers who passed their second session lessons may receive their certificates Thursday afternoon or evening.

Also on Thursday the annual water ballet, this year titled, "The Four Seasons," will be presented at 1:30 p.m. and at 7 p.m.

Mount Holly Takes Title

John Cole laced six hits in six trips and Bill Olney came up with a sparkling pitching performance Tuesday to lead Mount Holly to a 19-2 triumph over Moore's for the Rutland City softball championship.

Olney allowed just five hits and struck out 14 in picking up the victory.

It was Olney's second nifty pitching job in 24 hours. Monday, the Mount Holly ace limited Ray Reilly's to two hits and fanned 12 in chalking up a 2-0 win in a battle for first place in the City League.

In winning the crucial tilt against Ray Reilly's, Olney outdueled Walt Sanbrook who surrendered three hits and fanned six.

Pool Money On Agenda

City Atty. Crowley Tell of Efforts to Get Cash.

Mayor Harold J. Nichols said Monday that he expects the aldermen's meeting at City Hall Tuesday night to be one of the longest of the year. Much old and new business is scheduled to be discussed by the board, presided over by Craigie Perkins.

City Atty. Arthur Crowley will probably head the list of reports to be heard with a progress report on efforts by the city to obtain money from the Frances E. White Trust fund for a new swimming pool at White Playground.

A question of whether the fund money can be used for pool construction has sent the matter to Chancery Court for settlement.

The will would apparently allow construction, but the trust fund specifies cash can only be spent for maintenance.

Crowley may also report on an inquiry being made to determine if the Rutland Cable TV Company is legally obligated to service all parts of the city.

A three-man aldermanic committee is expected to issue a report on its work with an American Legion committee to obtain space for patriotic monuments in the Depot Parking Lot.

Mayor Nichols said the meeting will probably open with a public hearing on a request to locate a mobile home on Water Street.

Also facing the aldermen is a backlog of letters that have accumulated since the last meeting.

Crowley Warns Aldermen That Pool Cash Is Sticky

Board Orders More Study
After Being Told Vote
May Be Necessary.

BY HOWARD COFFIN

Whether the city will get money from the Frances E. White trust fund for construction of a new swimming pool was still a question after Wednesday night's meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

City Atty. Arthur E. Crowley came before the board with a report on his inquiry into the fund. Crowley also asked the board for more facts to pursue the matter to Chancery Court if necessary.

After the meeting, Crowley said the board had given him what he needed in the form of four motions.

However, he cautioned the aldermen that "the voters will clearly have to have some voice in this matter."

The four motions made by the board were:

— That the matter be referred to the Recreation Committee and again to Crowley to see exactly what the cost of operation of the pool would be.

— That Crowley consult the executors of the White will to see how they feel about withdrawing $56,000 from the fund's principal for the pool.

— That the city treasurer submit a report on the amount of money paid each year by the White fund to the city.

— That a study be made of how much money has been spent each year for upkeep of the White playground.

A clause in the White will has made the further investigation necessary. That clause states that the White trust fund money must be used to operate the playground "with no burden to the taxpayers".

After Crowley's report on the fund Wednesday, it became clear that the playground will become a taxpayer's burden if the pool money is taken from the fund.

Crowley said that the $4,000 paid each year by the fund just about covers operating expenses. He added that if $56,000 is taken away from the fund's principal of $144,811, interest from the fund will not meet expenses.

Crowley said that a thumping "no" vote on a bond issue for the pool money would give him a good lever for prying the cash loose from the trustees.

Crowley cautioned that the job of getting the money will be a tough one, because the will is conservative "and it appears that its trustees are going to be conservative in its interpretation."

The will says the money is to be spent for "maintenance and operation of the playground."

Crowley will report at the next meeting, after his talk with the executors. He said that he will probably be able to give a much clearer picture of the prospect of obtaining funds at that time.

Ask Money From Trust

City Atty. Crowley Makes Official Request for Swimming Pool Funds.

Rutland City Atty. Arthur E. Crowley Jr. Thursday asked the executors of the will of Mrs. Frances E. E. White if they would be willing to release $56,000 in matching funds for a new municipal swimming pool.

The executors are Atty. Christopher A. Webber and R. Clarke Smith. Crowley said that he expected to receive their opinions on the matter within a few days.

If the two men, who are in charge of executing Mrs. White's will, agree that the money should be subtracted from the $100,000 still remaining, the city may take the case to Chancery Court.

Control of the money is in the hands of the trustees of the will — the Rutland County Bank — and not the executors. And the bank has said that it will not release the money unless ordered to by a court decision.

Crowley said he feels if the executors agree with the city on the issue, a favorable decision would probably be handed down by the court.

Without their consent, the city attorney has expressed the belief that the issue would not succeed in court.

Crowley went to the executors Thursday after appearing at a meeting of the Rutland Chamber of Commerce swimming pool committee. At the meeting, he brought the members up to date on developments in the pool issue.

Headed by Dr. Donald Icken, the committee discussed at a luncheon meeting the money aspect and the specific plans for the type of pool construction.

Howard Jeffreys, state commissioner of recreation, was on hand at the meeting. He advised the committee that the need for accurate specifications by a swimming pool engineer was paramount.

At his urging, the committee decided to meet with Allen Associates of Bennington, a recreation consulting and developing firm, Thursday at the Chamber office to find out what the cost of a consultant to the project would cost.

White Fund Seeks Pool 'Facts'

Trustees Ask Details of Proposed Swimming Facility.

The trustees who control the money that helps support White Playground want to see some more definite information before they fork over any sum such as $36,000 to help build a swimming pool there.

But it appeared Friday, from a letter sent to the city by the trustees for the estate of Frances E. W. White, that there are reasons to hope a settlement can be reached.

Atty. R. Clarke Smith of the law firm of Ryan, Smith & Carbine, speaking for himself and Christopher A. Webber, asked for a list of specifications concerning the swimming pool, which has been proposed for White Playground in the southern section of the city.

The total cost of the pool has been estimated at $118,000. Service organizations will probably be asked to help shoulder part of the cost, the federal government has allocated until December a portion for the pool — and about $36,000 may come from a bond issue if it is allowed from the fund which

Mrs. White set up to establish the playground.

Atty. Smith is executor of Mrs. White's will, and Webber is president of the Rutland County Bank, where the trust fund reposes.

The gist of Atty. Smith's letter to City Atty. Arthur E. Crowley Jr. Friday was that the trustees of the fund would like to see some specific figures as to construction and maintenance cost, before coming to any decision as to whether the White fund should be tapped for that purpose.

At one time, it was thought that a chancery court decree would have to be obtained before the money could be used.

But it appeared from Friday's letter that if the city can provide some solid figures to the White trustees, the case may not have to be taken to Chancery Court.

A meeting is expected shortly between the trustees, city officials, and a special committee set up to work on plans for the pool. The committee is headed by Dr. Donald Icken.

The agreement between the White fund and the city was drawn up in 1958, when Atty. Martin J. Delliveneri was city attorney. It gives most of the power over disposal of the money to the trustees and executor.

Mrs. White's will was allowed in 1954.

"During the period (between 1954 and 1958) Mr. Webber and I participated actively in all phases of the (playground) project," Atty. Smith wrote Crowley Friday.

The counselor, describing establishment of the playground, continued: "This included site selection and land acquisition, the facilities to be constructed and the creation of the trust fund to provide, as far as possible, for the support and maintenance thereof."

"It is my opinion that all parties involved accomplished the best possible result under the circumstances then existing."

Atty. Smith said he needed to look at some facts and figures before deciding about using White fund money, and he specified as follows:

"I have no idea where, within the area of White Playground, it is proposed to locate this new facility and the extent, if any, to which such an addition would interfere with existing facilities."

"I have no idea what the size or cost of an Olympic swimming pool would be."

"I have no information concerning the estimated cost of operation of an Olympic swimming pool, and the source or sources from which funds to meet these costs will come."

"I do not know whether the pool is to be used as part of an adult or teenage recreation program, or whether it is designed and intended for use primarily by children."

"When I have sufficient information . . . then I will be in a position to give you and the City Council a statement . . ."

By the term "sufficient information," Atty. Smith was referring to a formal presentation which he can use not only to check the accuracy of the figures, but also to support a future accounting he may be called upon to make as executor of Mrs. White's will.

The rough figures for the pool have already been discussed extensively in Rutland, a map showing the size and location of the pool has been published, and Atty. Smith's relative participated in discussions about it on Dr. Icken's committee.

Chance Exists That Settlement May Be Arrived At.

But as to any formal notation, Atty. Smith's letter to Crowley concluded: "I have discussed this matter with Mr. Webber, and he has authorized me to state that he agrees with me that we have had insufficient information to form any decisions at the present time."

Dance Date

Rutland teen-agers can greet autumn Friday at the Lawrence Recreation Center where WHWB disc jockey Mike Sinclair will be featured for the weekly teen dance from 8:30 to 11 p.m. The new step to be introduced this week is "The Field Jacket," a dance borrowed from military circles and now making its return.

Gov. Hoff, Levine At Little League Banquet

Gov. Philip H. Hoff will address the 16 members of the Rutland Kiwanis Little League Baseball Team Monday at 6 p.m. in Royal's Heartside Restaurant.

The Kiwanis team captured the city Little League championship in this year's contest. Also at the dinner meeting, Louis (Humbles) Levine will recite "Casey at the Bat."

Jenne had agreed after an investigation of the General Electric Co. parking lot, that the location would not be suitable for the dances.

On the request of Bliss, Mrs. Stearns said she would bring the question of reinstating the dances at Monday's meeting.

Goldman, the manager of a women's clothing store which deals in a large teenage business, was the only member of the resident trio who said nothing all night.

The list Perry presented contained eight improvements, which, he said, the residents of the area had agreed were the most important, and which should be made by the city and the Recreation Department.

The improvements included a new entrance, possibly off South Main Street, adequate parking facilities, fencing of the whole area, grass cutting and more rubbish disposal, more lighting, sanitary toilet facilities, moving the children's play area from the cement, repair of the path to the Little League Field, and a full-time custodian to oversee the area.

Cioffredi commented that he was aware of their problems and had been prior to the petition, but that a shortage of manpower and cash kept some of their recommendations from being implemented.

The list will be discussed at a future meeting of the recreation committee, as will the suggestion that the will of Francis E. White be investigated to find out if more money is available for maintenance, the major complaint of the residents.

Concert

"Forward March" composed by Herbert Olson of Proctor, is one of the selections the Rutland City Band will play Sunday at an 8 p.m. concert at Main Street Park.

Halloween Parade Leaders Draw Preliminary Lines of Traditional March.

Members of the Rutland Recreation Department's Halloween Parade Committee met Monday night with Recreation Superintendent John W. Cioffredi to lay preliminary plans for the annual parade.

Parade officials were quick to note that Batman, the parade's traditional leader, will not desert Rutland, despite his current television-inspired popularity.

The Caped Crusader will again lead the spook-filled march through downtown Rutland.

Area schools will soon begin getting invitations to participate in the unique parade.

Any school who wishes to enter a band or float may do so, and any secondary school entering may choose a candidate from their classmates for the Pumpkin Princess crown.

School children from area elementary schools particularly are invited to march in costume in the parade. The annual rotating trophy awarded by the Recreation Department will go to the elementary school which has the highest parade marching attendance.

The first area organization to volunteer a float for the parade did so Monday night. The Civil Air Patrol will sponsor a color guard, drill team, and float for the parade.

Other schools, civic or church organizations, or individuals who want to enter a float, march, or help work on the parade should contact the Rutland Recreation Department.

Young Keglers

The junior bowling program at Bowlerama will start Saturday morning with registration only of all school age children from seven years up.

The program will be conducted and supervised under the direction of adults from the American Bowling Congress and the Women's International Bowling Congress.

Shirley Molnar and Donald Stone, officials of the local Junior Bowling Association, will head the program.

Children will be assigned to a team which will bowl competitively within each age group. A special new bowler's instruction program will be conducted to teach the young bowlers the basic fundamentals of the sport.

The complete program will get underway Oct. 8 at 3:30 a.m.

Pool Details Are Sought

Chamber Committee Meets With Professional Man to Obtain Exact Data.

The Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce's Swimming Pool Committee moved toward getting concrete details on the proposed $112,000 municipal swimming pool at a noon meeting Monday.

Stewart Allen of Bennington, a professional recreation consultant, pronounced the plans made so far by the Chamber as "reasonable and realistic".

Allen also outlined how his firm, the Allen Organization, can turn the general plans made by the Chamber committee into exact specifications and cost estimates.

Chamber and city officials clearly liked Allen's proposals. They asked him to provide them a sample contract so that they can try to obtain the money to hire him.

The Allen Organization's fees could be paid by a small additional state Interagency Committee on Natural Resources grant matched by local funds.

The White Playground Trust Fund was mentioned Monday by committee members as the most logical source of the matching money.

The Chamber committee also decided to ask representatives of the other two groups now working on various aspects of the proposed pool to join their meetings.

The other two groups — the Rutland Board of Aldermen and the trustees of White Playground — have been working primarily to find a way of financing the proposed pool.

White Playground is the proposed site of the pool.

The Rutland Recreation Department has worked directly with all three groups.

Teens Urged to Attend Recreation Meeting Here

Rutland teens interested in working on Teen Board activities at the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center are urged to meet Thursday at 7 p.m. at the center.

John W. Cioffredi, recreation chief, said "In order to provide what the teenager wishes, we must have their cooperation to suggest and help procure the activities."

of the pool would be provided by the state Interagency Committee on Natural Resources, which approved $49,721 in matching funds for the pool in August.

Rutland must match the Interagency Committee money before Dec. 1. Efforts to get the matching funds have centered on the trust fund established by the late Mrs. Frances E. W. White for the maintenance and development of the playground.

The trustees of the playground while apparently eager to cooperate with the city in financing the pool, have taken pains to adhere strictly to legal interpretation of the will and the playground trust agreement.

Discrepancies between the wording of the will and the trust agreement threw a legal block in the path of the pool, and it was thought that a session in Rutland Chancery Court would be needed to straighten the matter out.

But a letter from the playground trustees to the aldermen Monday night gave hope that Chancery Court may be avoided if the people working for the pool can give the trustees specific details on their project.

Observers feel that the request for details in itself indicates that the trustees may regard Chancery Court as unnecessary.

However, the difficulty faced by the Chamber committee and the aldermen is that the details trustees want will have to be provided by the Allen Organization — at a price.

Therefore, to obtain the money to pay the Allen Organization fee, city officials will have to ask for a small additional state grant. This grant, in turn will presumably have to be matched by the White Playground Trust Fund.

Officials commented that the White's trustees will probably authorize money for the Allen Organization's work since the planning would be a vital part of the pool and the trustees have been cooperative in the past.

Allen told Dr. Donald Icken, chairman of the Chamber committee, that his firm could supply the needed details within two months. The Dec. 1 deadline set by the Interagency Committee could be met under that schedule.

Santa Claus has already had his first letter of the year forwarded to him through the Rutland Recreation Department.

Rutland Postmaster Frank Duffy was reported to be happy that early Christmas mailing is beginning.

The rustle of falling leaves and the cool fall winds are reminders that winter is fast approaching. And to 11 million people it is a reminder of a favorite winter activity — western style square dancing.

Joining the rest of the nation in getting their western dancin' rears and neckerchiefs reared are members of The Rutland Squares, a local square dancing group formed by the Rutland Recreation Department.

As in past years, the Rutland Squares will sponsor adult beginners' square dance lessons for all interested Rutlanders and area residents.

The lessons, to be conducted at the Lawrence Recreation Center on Center Street, will start Tuesday. Jim Ford & Barre will be the caller and instructor.

"Mr. Jack O'Lantern," above in his best disguise, was seen by hundreds of motorists Monday afternoon as he sat in the sun at the Williams Farm Homestead north of the city. Area youngsters can win prizes by guessing the identity of Mr. O'Lantern at Halloween.

What's Roundish, Yellow, And Mysterious? Correct! It's Mr. Jack O'Lantern Again!

By HARRY B. LEVINS
(Vermont Pumpkin Bureau)

Mr. Jack O'Lantern is back. His presence was revealed at a press conference hastily called Monday by John Cioffredi, recreation superintendent.

While cameras whirled and flashbulbs popped, Cioffredi read a prepared statement:

"I have been authorized by Mayor Harold J. Nichols to announce that Mr. Jack O'Lantern has arrived in Rutland.

"O'Lantern, it is believed, will be available to ride in the Halloween parade this year.

"He has asked that his identity remain a secret until that night. However, O'Lantern challenged the children of Rutland County to guess his identity. He left one clue and said that others would follow."

Cioffredi then started to step down from the platform but was besieged by newsmen who wanted to know the first clue.

With a sense of drama, Cioffredi slowly unfolded a sheet of paper and read:

"Like the Shadow, I am heard, not seen.

"Not seen, at least, until Halloween."

Cioffredi couldn't be persuaded to reveal any more details. But his secretary, Miss Betty Mumford, a former hairdresser, told reporters that she caught a glimpse of "sandy blond" hair under O'Lantern's mask when he slid the first clue under the office door Monday morning.

In order to cover the story adequately, The Herald and Radio Station WHWB have pooled their resources to form the Vermont Pumpkin Bureau.

Clues will be released each

Tuesday (and the last two Fridays) before Halloween through the Pumpkin Bureau. They will be in the morning edition of The Herald and will be aired on WHWB starting at 3:55 p. m.

Radio newsmen said they hoped O'Lantern's voice could be taped to further aid the children.

Cioffredi said that any guesses as to O'Lantern's identity should be placed on a postcard (along with the child's name, age, address, and telephone number), and addressed to Mr. Jack O'Lantern, Rutland Recreation Department, Center Street.

Six prizes will be awarded to those who correctly name O'Lantern. The six winners will be drawn from all correct entries at the end of the Halloween parade.

O'Lantern will unmask himself at the drawing, set for the Depot Parking Lot.

Tiny Splash, Small Ripple; Councilmen Greet School Board's Big Proposal

Alderman Mullen Voices Formal Protest; No Action Taken by Aldermen.

By HOWARD COFFIN

The Board of Aldermen calmly listened to Superintendent of Schools William A. Atkins Jr. describe a proposed athletic field and recreation ground on Woodstock Avenue and then heard a rumble of discontent at the opening of their Monday night meeting at City Hall.

Alderman John Mullen provided the sole rumble.

Superintendent Atkins opened the meeting by describing the area on a large map.

He said: "We're interested in use of the poor farm as an athletic field for all the people of Rutland. We believe it would be a great asset to the city."

Opposition Slight

After Atkins' talk, Alderman John Mullen rose to say, "I would like to go on record as feeling that the entire complex could be housed sufficiently on land south of Woodstock Avenue."

Thus came a possible portent of things to come if the School Board ever asks for approval of the project. The School Board has proposed use of lands both north and south of Woodstock Avenue.

The two city boards have disagreed on the issue in the past. Earlier this year, the School Board's suggestion for use of the poor farm's 45 acres drew an angry outcry from the aldermen, particularly Mullen.

The aldermen earlier voted to subdivide 22 acres of the property into 1-acre building lots, thereby obtaining more taxable property to bolster city coffers.

Further debate and discussion on the issue is expected.

During a three-hour meeting, the aldermen also heard a report from John Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation Department, stating that repairs must be made on the swimming pool before it can operate next year.

JOHN MULLEN
... formal dissent

Cioffredi said a possibility exists that the pool's main line may have to be repaired, and that such a repair would cost $25 per foot.

He also said some drains must be repaired and other minor work done.

The aldermen granted approval to city treasurer W. Joseph Simonds to borrow up to $100,000 in anticipation of the payment of taxes.

Only Debate

The only heated discussion of the evening came after Alderman Ethel Stearns, chairman of the aldermanic Police Committee, reported that engineers from three local companies are working on city traffic problems at no charge to the city.

Alderman Howard Douglas then rose to ask Police Chief Stuart Jenne just what reservations he would have about accepting any recommendations the engineers might make.

Chief Jenne did not answer the question and Douglas asked again. Then Alderman John

Jack O'Lantern Slips by Hoff And Snelling

(Vermont Pumpkin Bureau)

"I know I'm tired after shanking hands all day," said Gov. Philip H. Hoff as he watched Route 4 traffic zip past the General Electric plant, "but I could have sworn that a pumpkin was driving that white car."

And so it was. Hoff's aides explained that the pumpkin was the mysterious Mr. Jack O'Lantern. They didn't know if he was a Democrat or Republican.

Missing his chance to find out was Richard A. Snelling, the Republican candidate for governor, who saw O'Lantern cruise past him in the same white car near the A&P parking lot.

"I wanted to explain to him," Snelling said, "that pumpkins would be exempt from any state sales tax."

O'Lantern's identity will be revealed Halloween, when prizes will be awarded to six youngsters who write the Rutland Recreation Department and tell them O'Lantern's real name.

Jack O'Lantern Scores Again, Gets Goodies

(Vermont Pumpkin Bureau)

Emerson Peake, manager of F. W. Woolworth's, saw him Thursday. Gerald Bradway, camera salesman for Wilson Sports, tried to take his picture.

But the mysterious Mr. Jack O'Lantern got away — with the goods.

O'Lantern told John Ciofredi, recreation supervisor, that seven downtown stores agreed Thursday to donate prizes for the Mr. Jack O'Lantern contest.

O'Lantern said that Wilson's, Woolworth's, Morton's Shoe Store, Carroll's Cut Rate, Fishman's, Wolk's To's 'n' Teens, and Freeman Jewelers will help reward the lucky youngsters who correctly identify the man behind the pumpkin mask.

In other developments, Ciofredi told the Vermont Pumpkin Bureau that the first cards bearing guesses as to O'Lantern's identity have arrived at the Recreation Department.

Asked if they were correct guesses, Ciofredi said:

"I don't know myself who he is, so I couldn't say. I won't know his identity until the Halloween parade."

"By the way," Ciofredi added, "we've already lined up bands from Rutland High School, Rutland Junior High School, and Mount St. Joseph Academy for the parade."

He said that floats are already planned by the Civil Air Patrol, the Castleton State College Student Assn., the Brandon Training School, and the Night Lotion (Rutland County Chapter Chapter).

Atkins Gives Athletic Field Details, Wants Land 'For All Rutland People'

The Woodstock Avenue athletic and recreation area proposed this week to the Board of Aldermen by School Superintendent William A. Atkins Jr. is a king-sized project. The complex would cover about 44 acres and cost in the neighborhood of $600,000.

Atkins presented a master plan of the area, prepared by the Allen Organization of Bennington, showing swimming pools, picnic areas, baseball and football fields, playgrounds, a running track, and other proposed attractions, on city land north and south of Woodstock Avenue.

The superintendent said Wednesday he has no illusion about early acceptance or completion of such an area. He explained that the master plan was prepared because federal matching fund specifications require such a plan.

He said the area, if accepted, would be built over a period of time, piece by piece.

"A Place for all the People" Atkins had described the entire area to the Board of Aldermen as a place "for all the people of Rutland."

Several months ago, the aldermen voted to sell the land north of Woodstock Avenue for housing lots. The money would be put into a sewer fund.

The aldermen, however, agreed at the School Board's request not to sell any land until April 1. The School Board will use the time to try to drum up public interest in their project.

Wednesday, Atkins and John Cioffredi of the Recreation Department agreed that the proposed athletic and recreation area could not be a place "for all the people of Rutland" if the aldermen voted to sell the land on the north side of the avenue.

South Side for Teams
Atkins explained that while the south side is mainly for team sports, especially school sports, the north side is for more individual activities, geared to provide something for all ages.

Alderman John Mullen said Wednesday that he thought the board might agree to extend the April 1 deadline on the land south of Woodstock Avenue. But he doubted that the board would vote to put off sale of land to the north.

A clear-cut difference in the general functions of land on each side of the avenue is evident in the School Board's plans.

The property on the south side of Woodstock Avenue would contain a fenced-in area to control admission to football games and track and field events. Within the fence would be a concrete grandstand with a capacity of 3,000 on the west side of the football field.

Says He Has No Illusions of Overnight Acceptance and Construction of Complex.

Across the field would be portable bleachers seating 1,000. The concrete grandstand faces a 220 yard straightaway on a quarter mile cinder running track. Envisioned inside the track is a football field.

Room For Track Events

Adequate room would be left on all sides of the track to accommodate such track and field items as the broad jump, pole vault, high jump, and discus.

The area would be entered through a gateway in a bath and field house.

The field house, near the main entrance to the south side of the complex, would contain complete locker room facilities for two teams, a first aid station, storage room, and rest rooms.

The bathhouse portion of the building would house complete shower room accommodations and would use a bag system for storage of personal items.

The bathhouse would also serve as the only entrance to the swimming pool and wading pool planned for the area.

Both pools would be surrounded by a common deck to allow ample poolside room.

The main pool would be "Z" shaped to allow swimming and diving to go on at once.

Long Home Runs

Located on the south side of the avenue would be a 165-by-300-foot soccer field and a baseball field with a batting range of 320 feet.

The football field's portable bleachers would be moved into this area for spring and summer sports.

A parking lot east of the football field would accommodate 340 cars. A grass area next to this lot will be available for extra spaces.

The section of the athletic complex north of Woodstock Avenue would be entered by an entrance drive leading to a parking lot for 163 cars. Paved walks would lead from the lot to all areas of the northern area.

On the southwest side of the parking lot, a shelter building with rest rooms, a canteen, and storage rooms would be located.

Near the building would be the pre-school area with play equipment such as a corral, climbing forest, spiral steps, and a teeter.

An apparatus area would lie to the south of the shelter, with slides, see-saws, swings, a merry-go-round, and jungle gym.

Nearby in an arts and crafts area would stand combination benches.

Another Diamond

Another baseball diamond would be located north of the avenue with a batting range of 320 feet.

Next to the diamond a softball field with 240 foot batting range and a 360 by 160 foot playing field would be constructed.

North of the fields, a multipurpose building would house two volleyball courts, two badminton courts, and three shuffle board areas. The building's 85-by-200-foot floor would also be used for dances, roller skating, and for ice hockey in the winter. An adjacent building would hold artificial ice making equipment.

The northernmost part of the area would be a wooded family picnic center with tables, benches and grills.

Landscaping of the entire property is designed to create sound buffers, provide shade where necessary, and screen various athletic activities.

Packers Humble Rams In City Flag Football Play

The Grade 5 and Grade 6 Packers trampled the Rams in city flag football action Thursday. The final score was 20-14, in a closely-fought battle at White Playground.

Outstanding among the youthful players was Chris Raleigh, who scampered for two of the Packer touchdowns. Raleigh turned in a 40-yard and a 10-yard run. Also scoring for the Packers was Jerry Douglas, who ran 60 yards for his score.

John Olson scored one touchdown for the Rams, and tossed to John Morse for the other.

State's Attorney Called Into Mysterious O'Lantern Case

(Vermont Pumpkin Bureau) State's Atty. Robert E. West has been called into the mysterious Mr. Jack O'Lantern case after another clue was dropped Monday by O'Lantern.

West was summoned by John Cioffredi, Rutland Recreation supervisor, after a clue was found under the door of the Rutland Recreation Department. West was reluctant to release the contents of the clue, saying that "recent decisions by the Supreme Court indicate that premature release of evidence to the press is contrary to due process of law."

However, Cioffredi was able to convince West that O'Lantern is not a suspect criminal but is instead hiding his identity from Rutland children until the Halloween parade.

Six children who correctly identify O'Lantern by means of a postcard to the Rutland Recreation Department will be awarded prizes after the parade.

West then read the clue to newsmen of the Vermont Pumpkin Bureau. The clue said:

"The letter 'M' is an important lead,
"As is the letter 'W';
"By thinking hard, there is no need
"For my real name to trouble you."

In other developments in the O'Lantern story, Lt. Col. William Sweeney, commanding officer of the 3rd Battalion, 172nd Armor, Vermont National Guard, confirmed reports that Mike Sinclair, WHWE disk jockey, will be on hand for the weekly teen dance Friday at 8 p.m. at the Lawrence Recreation Center.

Expected to be spotlighted as the new dance is "The Hastings," a step with origins dating back some 900 years to England.

Latin American Session For Local Woman's Club

The Rutland Woman's Club will observe United Nations Day Tuesday by hearing two talks on Latin America. William Wright, United Nations Day Chairman for Rutland, will open the 1:30 p.m. meeting at the Lawrence Recreation Center by describing his experiences in Honduras.

Wright recently visited Latin America as a member of a Partners' Team of the Alliance for Progress.

The Rev. William A. Jeffrey Jr. of the Rutland Baptist Church will outline plans for his church's neighborly assistance program in Nicaragua and El Salvador.

Mrs. Sam Sherman is in charge of the meeting.

Cowboys, Patriots Score Flag Football Victories

The Cowboys and Patriots have scored victories this week in the Flag Football League sponsored by the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department.

Skip Pratico's two touchdowns led the Cowboys to a 20-7 victory over the Rams. John Hier had the winners other score. John Olson scored for the Rams.

Nick Laoras scored the all-important extra point that gave the Pats a narrow, 13-12 decision over the Oilers. Laoras also had a touchdown to his credit, while Harry Brown scored the other.

Steve Seniff and Deane Peirce each scored for the Oilers.

Lively Sound Booked For Teen Session

Live bands on the mountain — and even livelier bands across the New York State line — have forced the hand of John W. Cioffredi, Rutland recreation superintendent. In order to satisfy Rutland's teenagers, Cioffredi has snared some live bands of his own.

Opening Friday night at the recreation center will be The Continentals, billed as one of the swingingest rock 'n' roll bands in New England.

This group has appeared live with such personalities as the Chiffons, the McCays, and the Detroit Wheels.

Cioffredi has also stated that other well known bands such as the Quarreymen, the Marksmen, and the Chasers will be booked into Rutland if this experiment proves successful.

Admission to the 8 to 11 p.m. affair will be $1.

Be Careful, Jack O'Lantern! The State Has the Heat On

(Vermont Pumpkin Bureau)

A disturbing note was sounded Thursday in the mysterious Mr. Jack O'Lantern case. Reports indicate that State's Atty. Robert E. West is attempting to foil the fun for Rutland children.

West has said this week that he has been investigating the case "in order to help the children of Rutland identify Mr. Jack O'Lantern."

The youthful state's attorney has even dispatched state troopers to pursue O'Lantern.

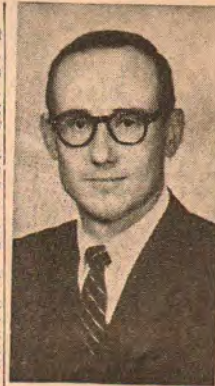

But his motives have been questioned.

Bob Liscinsky, bartender at the Carriage Room, said Thursday that many of the lawyers who patronize his establishment have dropped hints that West doesn't believe in Halloween and is attempting to unmask O'Lantern before the proper time.

"One young lawyer told me that West calls O'Lantern 'That dratted pumpkin,'" Liscinsky said. "Another said he saw West scurrying down the halls of District Court muttering, 'Curse you, O'Lantern!'"

West refused to comment on the affair. Sources close to his Mead Building office said that he doesn't want to cast a bad image in an election year by ruining Halloween for Rutland's children.

Six children who correctly identify O'Lantern on a postcard with their name, address, and age, will be rewarded with prizes after the Halloween parade Oct. 31, when O'Lantern has pledged to unmask himself.

Pumpkin Head Eludes Attorney West Again

By HARRY B. LEVINS

(Vermont Pumpkin Bureau)

State's Atty. Robert E. West almost captured the mysterious Mr. Jack O'Lantern Monday. The elusive O'Lantern escaped, but he left behind another clue for Rutland children to ponder.

West got on the track Monday morning when he received a phone call from another lawyer, Atty. J. Fred Carbine Jr.

Carbine told West that while on a coffee break at Seward's Dairy Bar, he had spotted O'Lantern driving down North Main Street.

Carbine said he followed O'Lantern and watched him disappear into the boarded-up Rutland Swimming Pool.

"Good work, J. Fred," said West. "You stay there and I'll be right up." West sped into the parking lot and found Carbine, who often serves as state's attorney in West's absence, still waiting.

West told Carbine to enter the pool and search through the dressing room on the north side while he searched the south.

"We'll trap him in the chlorine room in the back," West chuckled, "and then I'll unmask that dratted pumpkin."

The two set out and stealth-ily worked their way to the rear. Just as West entered the chlorine room, he spotted an orange-headed figure entering through the other door.

"Ha, O'Lantern, I've got you now!" cried West as he pounced on the man.

But the state's attorney had the wrong man. He had tackled the orange-haired Carbine — and O'Lantern had escaped through an open window.

The two attorneys found another clue left behind by O'Lantern in the chlorine room. West read the clue aloud to Carbine:

"Under the spreading chestnut tree

"Suggests an important clue for me,

"But I still claim I'll get the best

"Of State's Atty. Robert West!"

Children who think they know O'Lantern's true identity can write O'Lantern's real name along with their name, age, and address on a postcard, and send it to the Rutland Recreation Department.

Six children who correctly identify O'Lantern will be rewarded after the Halloween Parade on Oct. 31, when O'Lantern has promised to unmask himself — if West doesn't do it beforehand.

Ken Coleman Returns

Voice of Red Sox Will Address Local Little League Players.

By DAVE MORSE

Ken Coleman, voice of the Boston Red Sox, returns to Rutland tonight to address participants in the city's Little League baseball program at their annual awards banquet to be held at the Elks Club.

It was at radio station WSYB in Rutland where Coleman started a career in sportscasting that has taken him to the top in his chosen profession.

Coleman, a graduate of Curry College in Boston and a native of Quincy, Mass., did high school football games and covered the Northern League in 1947.

The Northern League was the proving grounds for many college baseball players of that era; much like the Cape Cod League is today. Among the Northern League stars of 1947 were Robin Roberts of Montpelier, Johnny Antonelli, Rutland pitcher, and Elba St. Claire, Rutland manager.

The next step up the ladder for Coleman was the play-by-play assignment to do Boston University football. He also did similar work in Worcester and Quincy, Mass.

He went to Cleveland in 1952 as one of the radio voices of the Cleveland Browns. He took over the telecasting of Browns' games one year later.

In 1954 Coleman began announcing Cleveland Indians baseball, which he continued to do until 1963. He has also done a number of nationally televised golf tournaments.

Coleman has won 12 awards from the American Federation of Television and Radio Broadcasters for excellence in broadcasting, and for four years running was named the outstanding broadcaster in the state of Ohio.

Coleman's credit also include the NFL championship game on radio in 1955 and '56, the NFL championship on television in 1957, the All-Star Pro Football game in 1958, the Pro Bowl game on television in 1962 and '63 and the NFL championship game in 1964.

Pumpkin Princess Awaits Crowning at Teen Dance

High School Halloween Queen Will Be Selected Here on Friday Evening.

(Vermont Pumpkin Bureau)

When Mr. Jack O'Lantern rides triumphantly in the Halloween Parade Monday, he'll have attractive company. O'Lantern will escort the 1966 Pumpkin Princess.

The princess will be chosen Friday evening at a Recreation Department Dance, entitled — appropriately enough — "The Pumpkin Prince."

Four schools will have candidates for the Pumpkin Princess. The schools are Rutland High School, Mount St. Joseph Academy, West Rutland High School, and Otter Valley Union High School.

Music for the coronation — and for the dancing — will be provided by The Continentals. The group "took Rutland by surprise" at last week's dance, said John Cioffredi, recreation superintendent.

"We're bringing them back by popular demand," he added.

Cioffredi has started a live-band policy after attendance at Recreation Department record hops dwindled in the face of competition from live bands at Killington and Hampton, N.Y., nightclubs.

The on-the-scene music worked last week, Cioffredi said. A large crowd of teen-agers jammed into Lawrence Recreation Center for the dance.

He noted that this week's affair would begin at 8 p.m. and swing through 11 p.m. He also muttered something about a $1 admission charge.

Junior Stamp Club Set For Formation Thursday

Rutland County stamp collectors are getting younger and younger — and as a result, an organizational meeting for a Junior Stamp Club will be held.

Youths between the ages of 10 and 16 will meet Thursday at 3:30 p.m. at the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center.

The announcement came at the recent meeting of the Rutland County Stamp Club. Appointed to a committee for the new group were Esme A. C. Smith, Thomas McDevitt, and Roger Harris.

About 15 boys have already indicated they are interested, according to Elroy M. Chase, president of the present club.

Officers will be picked at the meeting Friday next week.

Any boy who is interested may call any member of the committee or any officer of the adult stamp club.

DAILY HERALD, TUESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER

Ghost of Halloween Present Clues in State's Attorney

(Vermont Pumpkin Bureau)

The mysterious Mr. Jack O'Lantern dropped another clue to his true identity right in the lap of State's Atty. West early Monday morning.

West, who has vowed to unmask O'Lantern before Oct. 31 and thus ruin Halloween for Rutland's children, returned to his tiny apartment Sunday evening and went to bed after a supper of bread and butter and cold tea.

But the Congregational Church bell had scarcely tolled midnight when West realized that he wasn't alone. A figure wearing a sheet which bulged where a head should have been was standing in the room. Mr. Jack O'Lantern — the ghost of Halloween — present!

"What do you want with me, O'Lantern?" stammered West. O'Lantern said nothing. He snapped his fingers. Visions suddenly appeared before West's very eyes.

He saw children making Halloween decorations for school bulletin boards . . . he saw Emerson Peake stocking fresh candy on Woolworth shelves . . . he saw feverish activity at planning sessions for the Halloween parade in dwellings throughout Rutland . . . and everyone he saw was smiling.

West reached out to snatch at O'Lantern, but he was too late. O'Lantern snapped his fingers and disappeared, leaving West to ponder whether the whole episode was just a dream.

But it wasn't. Monday morning, West received a telephone call from School Superintendent William A. Atkins.

"Look, Bob," Atkins said, "I've read where you don't believe in Halloween, but when I got to my office today, I found an envelope tacked to the bulletin board. It said: 'To Robert West, when he wakes up.'"

"Yes, yes," cried West, "go on!"

"The note inside said," intoned Atkins, "and I quote:

"I'm seen downtown before noon.

"And heard around each afternoon.

"You really have to be a bumpkin.

"Not to guess who is this pumpkin."

"There wasn't any signature, Bob, and maybe one of the kids was pulling —"

But West had hung up. Another clue, and only one more week to unmask O'Lantern!

If West doesn't nab the mysterious pumpkin, six Rutland area children who write O'Lantern's true identity on a postcard and send it with their name, address, and age to the Rutland Recreation Department, will be awarded prizes after the Halloween parade Oct. 31.

O'Lantern has promised to unmask himself in a depot parking lot ceremony immediately after the mammoth parade.

Jack O'Lantern Leaves Still Another Clue, But State's Atty. West Shaken by Spirits

(Vermont Pumpkin Bureau)

The mysterious Mr. Jack O'Lantern left the final clue to his identity Thursday, and State's Atty. Robert E. West isn't quite sure just what to do with it.

West, who has pledged to ruin Halloween by unmasking O'Lantern before Oct. 31, trudged home to his tiny apartment Wednesday evening after a long day in court. He dined alone on cold toast and skimmed milk before turning in for the night.

But midnight had scarcely passed when the spirits again invaded West's domain. West opened his eyes and saw a misty figure standing in his bedroom.

"Who are you?" cried West, his voice quivering.

"I'm the ghost of Halloween future," replied the spirit in a voice sounding strangely like Louie Clifford's. "I've come to show you what your evil plans will cause."

The spirit snapped his fingers and West immediately saw a kaleidoscope vision of a world without Halloween. He saw children with sad faces because the end of October meant nothing more than the beginning of November.

He saw parents missing the fun of dressing the children in their costumes. He saw Emerson Peake sadly removing stacks of unsold candy from Woolworth's shelves. Finally, he saw a tombstone in St. Joseph's Cemetery marked with the inscription, "This Man Ruined Halloween."

"The pumpkins are being snuffed out all over Rutland, Robert West," said the spirit. "We shall not see them glow again in our lifetime."

The spirit snapped his fingers again and disappeared just as the sun peeked over East Mountain and the telephone rang. West reached for the phone with a shaking hand.

"This is Trooper Paul Huntley," said the voice on the other end. "We found another O'Lantern clue, this one tacked to the front door of the Center Rutland School."

"Read it, read it!" West shouted.

Huntley then intoned the clue for West:

"Draw an R with a giggle, "Make an S with a squiggle, "Then add up the Top 15, "And know my name on Halloween!"

West had the clue, but the spirit's visit had shaken him. He pondered his course of action late Thursday, with Halloween a scant four days away.

If West doesn't unmask O'Lantern before Halloween, six lucky youngsters who correctly identify O'Lantern on a postcard to the Recreation Department will be rewarded after the Recreation Parade Monday.

Youngsters should put their name, address, age, and telephone number — and their guess as to O'Lantern's identity — on the postcard. Midnight Sunday is the deadline.

New York Spooks, Goblins Have Good Teachers—Parents

NEW YORK (AP)—New York threw the most fabulous party in the history of the city Sunday — a Halloween fete for more than 20,000 masked and costumed kids in Central Park. They all behaved beautifully through the doughnut eating and apple dunking contests, but when it came time for the toys to be given out—well, you had to be there to believe it.

There were free punching bags, and yo-yo's and balloons. And there were parents. The kids were fine, but the mothers and fathers turned the fiesta into a fiasco.

They broke through police lines to grab the gifts and the kids had the pleasure of watching one mommy try to pull another mommy's hair out, scratch up her face or tear off her clothes.

The daddies couldn't interfere because they were too busy socking each other in the nose.

As someone remarked, "It's a real old-fashioned New York party." Policemen, like other spectators, watched, laughed and made no arrests.

The day was lovely — October's bright blue weather — the way Park Commissioner Thomas Hoving planned it.

Little witches, goblins and you name it lined up politely to get numbers so Mayor John V. Lindsay could judge their costumes.

The mayor didn't show up, music but nobody seemed to mind.

Hoving didn't come to his own party either.

The children, at that time about 10,000 strong, marched cheerily behind a Sanitation Department band playing "The Stars and Stripes Forever." When they got to Sheep Meadow, there were rows and rows of doughnuts hanging on strings for the kids to eat without using their hands.

One boy was thrown out of the competition for cheating — he used fingers — but otherwise all three rounds were sedate.

The kids, now 20,000 strong moved to the west side of the park where police had set up barricades from behind which Park Department employees were to hand out free toys.

Then they started trying to defend themselves, which is very hard to do when your assailants are children.

The kids jumped on the top boxes, each trying to see how many more he could get than the next one.

The parents weren't far behind, and soon the blue air was bluer with shouts of:

"You leave that alone, it's my Johnny's."

Scratch, scratch, pull, pull.
And the sound of fists on faces drowned out the ban music.

WHWB's Ralph Smith Unmasked as Mr. Jack O' Lantern Afterwards.

By MERLE F. JACKSON
The unmasking of Mr. Jack O' Lantern — Ralph Smith, WHWB disc jockey, Monday night following Rutland's traditional Halloween parade, had touches of the color of Walt Disney, the mystery of an Alfred Hitchcock film, and the joy of a GOP convention, nominating Barry Goldwater.

Mr. Jack O' Lantern, joined by dedicated State's Atty. Robert E. West, charming Pumpkin Princess Joan White of Otter Valley Union High School; an unnamed Batman, and energetic John W. Cioffredi, Rutland recreation chief, presented gifts to six of the youngsters who had correctly identified Mr. Jack O' Lantern.

Sending in the lucky postcards were Roy Donohue Jr. and Tina Donohue, both of 225 Adams St.; Robert and Lois Colomb of 118 Gibson Ave.; Kathy Gilligan of 72 Prospect St. and Scott LaPoint of 118 Gibson Ave.

Though some of the winners were apparently related, the drawing of the cards was 100 per cent honest, true blue, and notarized by the Great Pumpkin.

A rumor (not confirmed) spread around the city that the mayors of Rio de Janeiro and New Orleans were seen here watching the parade and its festivities seeking fun ideas to bring home with them.

When the unmasking was all over, the horde of night creatures disappeared from the main city parking lot to invade every lane, alley and street.

The Children

By PAT SLATTERY
Like the citizens of Pamplona in Spain, an estimated 6,000 Rutlanders crowded into the streets of downtown Rutland Monday night.

Rutlanders weren't there for a bullfight, however. They turned out for Halloween and the traditional Rutland parade.

Hundreds of children, dressed in multi-colored costumes, crowded the parade route to watch as their older brothers and sisters marched by.

A profusion of pirates, gypsies, animals, ghosts, monsters, and Batmen dotted downtown streets.

The children, most of whom successfully escaped the clutches of their parents, dashed into the street whenever a Pumpkin Princess candidate scattered candy into the crowds.

Shouts of "there he is," went up from the crowds when Batman, surrounded by his family, triumphantly passed by on a large float.

Dressed in his familiar purplish grey and black outfit, Batman accepted the cheers of his frenzied fans.

Another Batman, accompanied by a feminine Robin, rode in the middle section of the parade in an expensive convertible.

Many parents, most holding small children or pushing them in baby carriages, were also on hand to enjoy the festivities.

Area high school band members, some looking like California's ill-famed Hell's Angels, did their best to warm the crowd with peppy marching music.

The crowds were awed at the large number of different costumes which were worn by parade members.

One boy, who obviously brushes after every meal, was dressed as a red and white tube of toothpaste.

"There's the great pumpkin," one child yelled as a large youth, covered with an orange paper mache costume passed by.

The Night

By HOWARD COFFIN
Monday was a cold night. It was especially cold after a week of Indian summer weather. "I guess we've had our share of summer," said a man on the streets.

But the night was Halloween. To be melancholy on Halloween is a very difficult thing, especially when the streets are full of goblins.

The crowd that turned out Monday night to watch the Halloween parade wind its way through the streets of the city was large. Bands, and flags, and many marching people always bring out parade lovers.

To wear masks, and eat candy, and march behind a band, and just to be out on a school night, was apparently enough attraction to bring out every child in Rutland.

There must be a lot of people who do not like parades, and perhaps those who are bothered by children.

But, by the numbers, almost every able bodied citizen must have lined the city streets Monday night.

Halloween comes at the right time of the year. Just when people need a little gaiety.

Anyone who walked the downtown streets Monday night saw happy people.

Any little bit of happiness in the winter season of the year, is mighty.

So they were all there Monday night — on the streets, their faces masked with smiles as the children's faces hid behind guises of witches and goblins.

To resist becoming a part of the mad midnight world on a night that must be magic, and all the world seems happy is difficult indeed.

The Bands

By DON FREDETTE
One of the happiest and by far the longest of Rutland's traditional Halloween parades made its way through the streets of Rutland Monday night. Costumed ghosts, goblins, and spooks added to the eerie atmosphere.

The parade's focal point, depot parking lot, became a mass of confusion as State's Atty. Robert West, joined by Pumpkin Princess Joan White, finally unmasked Mr. Jack O' Lantern, who was none other than Ralph Smith, popular WHWB disc jockey.

Contributing to the merriment were six of the state's top high school bands.

Led by their snappy majorettes, the green wave of Mount St. Joseph belted out school numbers as they marched through the streets. The equally snappy red and white of Rutland High School followed by Rutland Junior High School impressed the crowds and showed what a marching band looks like.

Rutland also had the chance to see two fine bands in Otter Valley Union High School and West Rutland High School.

Rutland's own Scarlet Knights Drum and Bugle Corps echoed their traditional "Cherry Pink and Apple Blossom White" through the downtown area which added greatly to the happy Halloween saturnalia.

Of Kids ...

Halloween is witches, goblins, pumpkins, ghouls, and many other unnamed creatures, but mostly it is children, and children can be any of these things on that magic night. The children in Monday's Halloween parade masked to suit their fancies, and were, for one night, strange faces in a crowd of happy celebrants.

At last Mr. Jack O' Lantern is unmasked. He is the one, the only, Ralph Smith, famed WHWB disc jockey. Here he adjusts his glasses after State's Atty. Robert E. West did the honors before a horde of youngsters (of all ages) in costumes Ed Mead of Hollywood would have been proud to design.

New York Spooks, Goblins Have Good Teachers—Parents

NEW YORK (AP)—New York threw the most fabulous party in the history of the city Sunday — a Halloween fete for more than 20,000 masked and costumed kids in Central Park. They all behaved beautifully through the doughnut eating and apple dunking contests, but when it came time for the toys to be given out—well, you had to be there to believe it.

There were free punching

And there were parents.

The kids were fine, but the mothers and fathers turned the fiesta into a fiasco.

They broke through police lines to grab the gifts and the kids had the pleasure of watching one mommy try to pull another mommy's hair out, scratch up her face or tear off her clothes.

The daddies couldn't interfere because they were too busy socking each other in the nose.

As someone remarked, "It's a real old-fashioned New York party." Policemen like other

Robert West Is Good Sport On Halloween

The best sport around town for Halloween just had to be State's Atty. Robert E. West.

West was approached in early October and asked if he would be willing to play the part of a Scrooge-like villain for the Mr. Jack O'Lantern contest. "That would be fun," West said. For the next three weeks, he became the arch foe of Rutland's children and was tabbed "the man who wants to ruin Halloween."

But all's well that ends well, and West rode Monday evening in the Recreation Department Halloween parade with O'Lantern, smiling gamely and throwing candy to the children lining the streets.

O'Lantern — Ralph Smith of WHWB — cooperated nobly by keeping a straight face when children shouted "Mr. O'Lantern" at him during the three-week period.

John Clifffredi, superintendent of the Rutland Recreation Department, offered his thanks Tuesday to the merchants who donated prizes for the O'Lantern and Pumpkin Princess events, and to the Night Legion, the Jaycees, and the Police and Fire Departments for their help with the parade.

At The Herald and WHWB, the Vermont Pumpkin Bureau was deactivated, its job done or another year.

Toys for Kids Again Asked By Cioffredi

Toys for needy children will again grace Christmas trees this year, courtesy of the Rutland Recreation Dept.

John Cioffredi, department superintendent, said Thursday that more than 60 families received toys last year.

For this year's program, the seventh annual, Cioffredi is again asking Rutland residents to donate toys.

He asked that toys either be new or in usable shape.

"We just don't have the time, the manpower, or the materials to repair broken toys," Cioffredi said.

"What we would like is a toy that the donor would also give to his own child," he added.

He said that the program is designed for children up to 11 years old, so toys should be donated with that age group in mind.

Cioffredi asked that donors leave toys at the department's office in the Lawrence Recreation Center.

Another Extension Is Needed If Rutland Is to Have Its Pool

It looks very much as if the city will have to ask the state for another extension on its money for a new swimming pool.

The present deadline is Dec. 1, and the city won't have its own share of the financing figured out by that date.

Rutland was already granted one extension by the Interagency Committee on Natural Resources. The next extension, if granted, will have to be the last one.

A new pool at White Playground, costing in the neighborhood of $115,000, has been proposed. About half the funds would come from the Interagency Committee, which distributes federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation funds in the state.

The committee allocated about $60,000 to Rutland, to be sent whenever the city made up its mind.

But Rutland officials couldn't decide how the city should pay for its own share.

So they asked for an extension on the deadline for taking up the Interagency Committee's offer, and got until Dec. 1.

City officials disliked the idea of a bond issue, and sought to use some of the funds in the trust established under the will of Mrs. Frances E. W. White.

She left money for acquisition of White Playground and its upkeep, but in the contract drawn up between the city and executors of her will 10 years ago, most of the power over disposal of the funds was given to Atty. R. Clarke Smith and the Rutland County Bank.

They said they didn't want to loosen the purse strings until they saw more definite specifications for the pool. Recreation Director John W. Cioffredi and a Chamber of Commerce Committee have been working on the specifications, but haven't finished them yet.

The only solution, unless the city is to shelve the whole project, is to ask the Interagency Committee for another extension. It appeared Friday that such a request will be made next week.

Extension Granted! Rutland Obtains Final Three Months to Try for Pool

Extra Time No Surprise to City Officials; Nor Is New Ultimatum.

The Interagency Council on Natural Resources Monday granted Rutland a three and one-half month extension on its Dec. 1 deadline for producing matching funds for a new swimming pool.

The extension came as no surprise.

A member of the city pool committee had said Monday that obtaining the added time was just a formality and was "the least of the committee's problems."

But the council warned that this is the last extension the city will get this fiscal year.

The state has approved footing half of the estimated $115,000 cost of the pool if Rutland will match its ante.

The city pool committee, headed by Dr. Donald Icken, has run into roadblocks over finding funds to pay for architect's drawings and for the pool itself.

Interagency council president Elbert Moulton said Monday night that he notified Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce Managing Director Cliff Barnes Monday morning of the extension.

Barnes confirmed the announcement that will give Rutland until March 15, 1961 to get the necessary funds.

However, Moulton said, "We want to give Rutland every chance in the world, but we can't go past March 15."

He said that if Rutland doesn't make its new deadline, the state money will probably go to some community which has funds readily available.

Moulton said a failure to meet the deadline would mean that the city would have to "start all over again next year" if it still wants a pool.

Mayor Harold J. Nichols sent a letter to Moulton Monday before the extension was announced, asking for the additional time.

The letter explained that the extension "will take us over the March Town Meeting. If need be, this could be put to the voters at this time."

Nichols concluded by saying, "I am very much interested in the project and feel this is much needed for Rutland."

The pool committee hopes to obtain the city's share of the money from a trust fund set up under the will of Mrs. Frances E. W. White for care of the White Playground where the new pool would be located.

$9,000 Is Needed For Pool Plans

City Will Ask Another
Deadline Extension;
Barnes Is Confident.

By HOWARD COFFIN

A lack of funds to cover the cost of plans and specifications has caused a delay in progress on a new city swimming pool. An informed source disclosed this fact Sunday night and hinted that the end of the "hang-up" might not be in sight.

The delay is forcing the swimming pool committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. Donald Icken, to ask the state of Vermont to extend Rutland's deadline for providing matching funds.

The state gave the city until Dec. 1 to obtain the funds.

Cliff Barnes, Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce director, said Sunday night that extending the deadline will be "no problem." Barnes added, "I wish all our problems were as simple as that one."

He said someone will call Montpelier this week and obtain the pool's new lease on life.

Assuming that the extension is obtained, it will probably be the last one. City officials have indicated that a next chance will be a last chance.

The city has hoped to obtain half of the pool's costs from the trust fund established under the will of Mrs. Frances E. W. White for maintenance of the White Playground.

The pool is planned for the playground.

But executors of the trust fund, Atty. Christopher Webber and Atty. R. Clarke Smith, have asked to see detailed plans of the pool before making a decision on granting the money.

The pool committee's problem is where to get the money to pay an engineer to draw up the plans.

Cost of hiring an engineer is estimated at eight per cent of the pool's total cost. With the cost of the pool estimated at $115,000, an engineer's fee might be about $9,000.

An informed source said Sunday that no one seems to have such money.

Until such funds are obtained, the pool project seems to have gone about as far as it can go.

Cliff Barnes said Sunday that he hopes to have a meeting on the pool sometime this week.

Preliminary plans for the pool call for an L-shaped structure 164 feet long, as opposed to the present North Main Street Pool's 120-by-90-foot oval dimensions.

Unlike the present pool, the new one would be constructed below ground level.

Plans call for the present city pool to continue in use after construction of any White Playground pool.

The city is also facing problems with its present pool. Several weeks ago, Recreation Superintendent John Cioffredi told the Board of Aldermen that the 35-year-olds structure needs extensive repairs.

Among the old pool's problems are a possible defective main line that might cost several thousand dollars to repair.

The proposed new pool would be located west of the field house which now stands on the White Playground.

Plans call for a bath house to be built beside the new pool. The pool committee plans to ask local service clubs to foot the bill for the structure.

The pool's cost would include under water lights, diving boards, life guard towers, ladders, and ropes.

Undergrads

Shots

Measles clinics will be held in Rutland Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon at Mount St. Joseph Academy and the Rutland Recreation Center.

The Rutland County Medical Society approved the clinic plan in an attempt to stop spread of measles in Rutland. During the last three weeks, 641 children have been given measles shots by county physicians in the area elementary schools.

But the spread of measles has continued. Fifty-five cases were reported in Rutland in the last two months.

Parents are urged to bring children who have not yet had measles or measles shots, to one of the two clinics on Saturday. Parents must accompany children to the clinic. Children from one to 15 may attend.

For further information, call the Rutland Public Health Nursing Office.

Party!

Christmas trees and popcorn and color cartoons and Santa Claus and free soft drinks and — sounds like a party and that's what it is.

John Clout, superintendent of the Rutland Recreation Department, has announced that the department's annual Christmas party for all Rutland youngsters will be held Saturday at 9:30 a.m. at the Lawrence Recreation Center.

Parents who wish to accompany their children are free to join in the fun, Clout added.

RECREATION HELP

To the Editor: The Saint Peter's School Association would like to take this opportunity to openly thank the Rutland Recreation Department and those girls from the College of Saint Joseph the Provider for the many recreational activities they have set up for the Rutland area youth and the many hours they have devoted to this task.

We feel that the work and devotion of these people and their concern for our youngsters should be made known publicly; we hope they will accept this as a small token of our appreciation.

Pool Hopes Fade Behind Closed Doors As Leaders Decide $9,000 Is Needed

Trust Fund Directors Need Details—And Details Cost Money.

Rutland will have to raise $9,000 before any money becomes available for construction of a swimming pool at The White Playground.

This was the consensus after a one-hour closed door meeting at City Hall Monday afternoon.

Howard Jeffrey, State Director of Recreation, met Monday with Mayor Harold J. Nichols, Chamber of Commerce Managing Director Clifford Barnes, and Pool Committee Chairman Dr. Donald Icken.

The topic of discussion was how much money would be needed immediately for plans and specifications for the pool.

A member of the pool committee had indicated $9,000 would be needed for plans.

Barnes had said previously only about $3,000 would be needed at present.

Need Details

The executors of the White trust fund, where it is hoped that half of the pool's estimated $115,000 cost will come from, have asked to see plans and specifications of the pool before making any decision on granting the money.

Mayor Harold J. Nichols said Monday that he believes the trust fund executors will want to see finalized, complete plans.

Chamber Managing Director Barnes has maintained that only about $3,000 is needed at this time. Barnes has stated that this amount would cover preliminary plans and specifications and that these are all the White Trust Fund executors need before making a decision.

But after the meeting Monday, the four agreed that the executors will have to be provided with final plans.

A member of the pool committee said last week that the total cost of pool plans will be about eight per cent of the total pool costs—about $9,000.

Jeffrey did give some hope that Federal aid might be available to cover half of the $9,000 plans bill. He will let the pool committee know as soon as possible if the money can be obtained.

As of Monday, the city has 99 days remaining in which to raise its half of the $115,000 pool cost.

Rutland is now starting on its second time extension granted by the state for securing the money.

The first extension ran out Dec. 1, but Montpelier recently gave the city until March 15.

Much work remains if the city is to get the pool.

Plan Money First

First, money must be secured for the plans. None of the four men who met Monday was sure just how Rutland will get the $9,000 or $4,500 if Federal funds are available.

If plan money is obtained, then, someone must be hired to draw up the plans.

The plans must then be submitted to the White Trust Fund executors for a decision.

If the Trust Fund will foot the city's half of the bill, then the pool should be as good as built.

The money will have to come before March 15, however.

If the trust fund should agree to provide half of the city's 50 per cent of the pool's cost, then other money would have to be raised, perhaps by referendum.

During Monday's meeting, Jeffrey warned those present that March 15 is a final deadline to get that money.

City Has Until March 15 to Get Its Half of $115,000 Pool Will Cost.

line. After that time, no more extensions will be granted.

Elbert Moulton, director of the Vermont Development Department, said last week that the money earmarked for Rutland at present would go to some other community if Rutland misses its March deadline.

Moulton said the city could reapply for the money next year.

But fears are being expressed around city hall that the state funds might not be as available next year.

At present, everyone is hoping to have the money by March 15.

One city official said: "Someone is going to have to move a little faster if we're going to get that money."

Sing-In

—12-17-66

Rutland shut-ins who would like to be serenaded by Christmas carolers Saturday night may call the Rutland Recreation Department, John W. Cioffredi said Thursday.

A group of city young people will tour Rutland singing carols to shut-ins—and anyone else who will listen.

Youngsters more than 10 years of age who want to join the carolers will be welcome, Cioffredi said. He added that hot chocolate for the singers will be available after the frosty tour.

Carolers are asked to dress warmly, and to gather at the Recreation Center at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Each member of the team received like trophies for their participation.

The gathering also enjoyed the showing of this fall's MSJ-Rutland High football game films, which were narrated by the winning Mountie coaches, Fundsie Cioffi and Jim Grady.

Each member of the team received like trophies for their participation in the summer program. Ronald Keefe, Eagles president, made the presentations. Team members included Don Giles, Gerry Brislin,

Alderman Robert E. Harrison was master of ceremonies for the event, which was also attended by Lt. Gov. Jack Daley, who had two sons on the team.

City Finally Revises Burning Laws, Modernizes Its Bookkeeping System

Aldermen Handle Long List of Matters at Lengthy Meeting This Week.

The city ordinance governing outdoor burning has been strengthened. The Board of Aldermen voted Monday night to approve a Francis Gallagher motion to reword Section 26 of Chapter 15 of the city ordinances, the burning ordinance.

The board unanimously approved the revamped ordinance, which now reads as follows:

"No person shall burn or attempt to burn outdoors, any substance whatsoever, without written permission from the fire marshal, except that waste paper and cardboard may be burned in an incinerator approved by the fire marshal, located not less than 25 feet from all buildings. All outdoor burning shall take place only between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. This section shall not apply to the cooking of food by the use of facilities constructed to control flame and smoke. The city dump operated by the City of Rutland shall be an exception to the terms of this section."

The old ordinance set no time limits on outdoor burning and made burning permissible in gardens 50 feet from any building in the daytime without the permission of the fire marshal.

The aldermen met for four hours Monday and handled a variety of business.

On Nov. 21, State Auditor of Accounts Jay H. Gordon addressed the board on a list of recommendations he had compiled for improving city bookkeeping. Gordon outlined 15 proposals compiled after examining the 1964-1965 city audit. Monday night, the aldermen voted to accept the recommendations made by Gordon.

The board heard a report from its Police Committee and Police Chief Stuart Jenne stating that Woodstock Avenue east of Lafayette Street need not be made a four-lane highway at present.

The report, read by Police Committee Chairman Ethel Stearns, said, however, "that, if during the ski season, the chief feels it would further relieve any possible congestion, he can prohibit parking on Woodstock Avenue at any time."

The board voted to accept the report.

The aldermen voted, after some discussion, to approve a building permit for the College of St. Joseph the Provider's new $450,000 dormitory.

The board rejected the request two weeks ago until the dormitory's sewage system was approved. The building request called for a septic tank and sanitation "field."

Assistant City Clerk John Barrett read a letter from Edward L. Tracy, director of the state Bureau of Environmental Sanitation, approving the school's planned sewage facilities.

The aldermen then granted approval of the building permit.

The board also granted building permits to Joseph McLaughlin for an $18,000 ranch house with attached garage, to Joseph Russo for a $15,000 one-family house at 66 North St., and to Boule Brothers for a $15,000 house on Haywood Avenue.

From now on, Fire Chief Alfred H. Kolonski will be required to sign all permits for buildings in the downtown fire district.

A building permit for section two of the shopping center brought the matter to the aldermen's attention when it was noticed that the chief's signature wasn't on the document.

Earlier in the evening, the board had held a lengthy discussion about a building request submitted by Hiram Hutton for a building which didn't meet the requirements placed on fire zone buildings.

The board finally voted approval of Hutton's permit, but decided to ask the chief to check fire zone permits in the future to avoid confusion.

The shopping center permit, covering the building from the First National Store to the Firestone Store, will probably be approved at the board's next meeting.

The board's Recreation Committee recommended that a sign be placed in Main Street Park saying, "Positively No Ball Playing in This Park."

The Committee, directed by Alderman John Burke in the absence of Alderman John Mullen, said it felt enough playgrounds and recreation areas exist in the city without using the park.

The board adopted the committee's recommendation and also voted to place a similar sign on the Meldon School property.

The school land is being reserved as a possible site for a new fire station.

The long meeting closed as the aldermen adjourned to a Board of Control Commissioners meeting. The board voted to approve the license application of Erwin E. and Phyllis L. West for a second class license at the Woodstock Avenue Grocery at 144 Woodstock Ave.

Holiday Play

The Rutland Recreation Department will conduct its third annual Holiday Basketball Tournament for high school and college students during the holiday recess beginning Monday.

All high school students, and those home on college vacations are invited to sign up in teams at the Recreation Department.

The regular meeting of Senior Citizens will not be held this week because of the holiday.

The Recreation Department announced Tuesday that the women's physical education program will be cancelled until after the holidays.

Good Replies To Toy Drive From Public

By DON FREDETTE

Dear Mr. Cioffredi, Believe me, this is the most difficult letter I have ever written.

I have three little boys, ages three, five, and six, and have no way of making a Christmas for them.

Their father died last winter and we were forced to go on welfare. I am sick and can't even work part time.

After paying my fuel, rent, and other bills, I have only $5 left to go until next pay day, which is Jan. 1.

If you or one of your helpers could find a way to send my children a couple of presents, I would be eternally grateful.

I thank you and God bless you.

This letter was received this week by John W. Cioffredi, Rutland and Recreation superintendent.

The Recreation Department provides needy children throughout the city with toys each year.

"If we can help it, no child in this city will go without a Christmas as far as toys are concerned," Cioffredi said Friday.

Cioffredi receives a confidential list of needy families from the overseer of the poor.

He then makes an annual request to Rutland citizens for toys for these families.

Cioffredi reported that hundreds of toys have already been received, ranging from miniature dolls to an occasional bicycle. The majority of the toys are in good shape, "but we do receive some broken pieces which we try to fix," he said.

William Reardon, a recreation department employee, said that each year the department receives more toys than the preceding year.

"We still aren't doing what we would like to," Reardon said. "In this period of prosperity, the 'Great Society' should be aware of the great need of some of the less fortunate."

"A good example of the real spirit of giving is the Children's Rehabilitation Center on Park Street," Cioffredi said.

"We have been sending toys to the handicapped children for years."

"This year, they wanted to do something for someone less fortunate than themselves, and they sent the department all their old toys. I think this is one of the most heartwarming gestures we have experienced during our toy collecting program," he added.

Cioffredi said that anyone wishing to donate toys may contact his office.

Faced with the chore of wrapping presents for the needy, Miss Sandy Paul smiles at a toy tiger to be distributed to some child in the city.

Emphasis Is on Giving For Children at VAC

The emphasis is on giving this year at the Children's Rehabilitation Center on Park Street, run by the Vermont Association for the Crippled Inc.

Earlier this month, the 30 children at the center donated some of their own toys to the Rutland Recreation Department's toys-for-the-needy program.

Last week, the Thanksgiving turkeys still on bulletin boards gave way to angels, while handmade presents were turned out for parents, relatives and friends.

A Christmas party on Friday was highlighted by a tree cut from the farm of one VAC youngster, who promptly became a classroom hero.

Decorations for the tree were made by the youngsters.

Rutland Historical Planned Holiday Games At Rutland Recreation Center

John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department, has prepared a list of activities to keep city children entertained during the holiday vacation.

Anyone interested in participating in any of the events must sign up at the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center by Friday.

From 10:30 a.m. until noon, the gym will be turned over to boys in the same grades so that they may test their prowess with a basketball.

The high school and college students annual basketball tournament will be held in the gym in the afternoons during the week. The tournament will run from Dec. 26 to Dec. 29.

On Tuesday, the Grade 7 and 8 boys will participate in the basketball event from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Grade 7 and 8 girls will use the gym for the basketball event from 10:30 a.m. until noon Tuesday.

Cioffredi has also planned a ping-pong tournament for Tuesday.

A novelty contest will be held at the recreation center on Wednesday from 9 a.m. until noon. For girls in Grades 3, 4, 5, and 6, the event will be held from 9 a.m. until 10:30 a.m. Boys in the same grades will hold their contest from 10:30 a.m. until noon.

A pool tournament will also be held on Dec. 28 from 9 a.m. until noon for boys in Grades 7 and 8.

On Dec. 29, novelty skill contests for Grade 7 and 8 pupils will be held at the recreation center. Girls will hold their event from 9 to 10:30 a.m. The boys event will run from 10:30 a.m. until noon.

On Dec. 30, Cioffredi and his staff will award prizes for all the events.

The recreation center's game and health rooms will be open all week.

To Vergennes 'Extremely Worthwhile'

Group Discusses Units Made of Gunnite With Counterparts in the North.

Members of the Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce's Swimming Pool Committee were enthusiastic Wednesday after talking with swimming pool authorities in Vergennes Tuesday night.

Seven Rutlanders interested in the proposed pool went to Vergennes to get the facts about two pools built there recently.

Dr. Donald Icken, chairman of the chamber committee, described the trip as "extremely worthwhile".

"It's very heartening to get some of the definite answers we've needed for so long," Dr. Icken said.

He described the Vergennes trip as primarily a fact-finding jaunt. He said that his committee still has not decided on a specific type of pool to recommend to the Board of Aldermen.

Both pools in Vergennes are made of gunnite, a form of air-sprayed concrete. Icken said that the Chamber committee will probably recommend either a gunnite pool or a pool of poured concrete construction, but avoided a specific choice.

Although the heavy blanket of snow which has covered Vermont since the night before Christmas made actual inspection of the two pools impossible, lengthy discussions with authorities connected with both pools answered the local committee's questions.

One of the pools in question is a municipal pool within the small city's limits. The other is located at Basin Harbor, a nearby Lake Champlain resort.

A group of Vergennes' citizens headed by former state Sen. and Municipal Judge Samuel Fishman of Vergennes met with the Rutland group.

citizens, were all enthusiastic about their gunnite municipal pool.

A representative of the Basin Harbor Club, which has a gunnite pool, commented: "We haven't spent more than $200 on the maintenance of our pool in the three years we've had it."

Also at the meeting of the two pool committees was Clayton Besch of Albany, N. Y., representing Padlock Pool Builders, Inc., a firm which builds gunnite pools. The Northeast Pool Co., another builder of gunnite pools, was mentioned by the Vergennes committee members.

Co-chairman of the Vergennes committee are Dr. Alan Wright and Robert Ryan, both of Vergennes.

Both the Vergennes pools are smaller than the one contemplated by Rutland committee members.

Fishman, after outlining the history of Vergennes' efforts to get its 6,000 square foot, Z-shaped pool built, noted that contributions from Vergennes industries and individuals raised the city's share of the pool's construction costs.

A referendum vote to bond for the city's share of the pool had failed, Fishman said.

Several questions on the installation and maintenance of gunnite pools were answered by the Vergennes' people.

The Rutland committee's efforts to obtain the city's share of the proposed new Rutland Municipal pool have centered about a trust fund established for the maintenance of White Playground.

The trust fund — technically called the Rutland City Trust Fund for White Playground — provides for the care and expansion of facilities at the playground.

The state Interagency Com-struction of the $112,000 pool. The trust fund has been seen as the most likely source of the city's share of the pool.

Trust fund executors have asked for more details about the pool before releasing the money. This request and the Chamber committee's own need for detailed information prompted the journey to Vergennes.

The city has been told by state officials that it must find its share of the pool costs by March 15.

Chamber committee members who journeyed to Vergennes were Alderman Daniel Allen, Rutland Mayor Harold J. Nichols, Chamber Managing Director Clifford Barnes, Dr. Icken, architect Ernest Erickson, and former city engineer Robert Carrara.

Alderman Richard Burke, a member of the aldermanic Recreation Committee, also attended the meeting.

Planning Explained at LWV Meeting

By HOWARD COFFIN

"We must determine now what types of communities we want to have in this state. We must set goals. Regional Planning is one of the ways that we will achieve these goals," said Richard RuBino of the Central Planning Office in Montpelier.

"If the city's voters don't approve the regional planning in March, we won't get any federal funds for water. Then the water bond issue on the ballot will go down the drain too," said Mayor Harold J. Nichols.

"What the federal government is doing in encouraging things like regional planning is insuring that our tax dollars won't be wasted as they have been in the past because of a lack of planning," said Rutland's representative to the proposed Rutland Regional Planning Commission's steering committee, George Oakman.

"Most of the people that are going to flood this state in the next 50 years are going to be coming here to make a buck. We've got to plan now so our state won't be ruined by these people," said the steering committee's chairman, John Mulligan of Castleton.

"If we do not sign up (for Regional Planning), Rutland can be prevented from receiving grants of federal funds towards certain capital improvements we hope to make during the next few years," said Aldermanic President Craigie S. Perkins.

The five men made these statements before a League of Women Voters informational meeting on regional planning held at Lawrence Recreation Center.

But things were not as tidy as the statements might suggest Tuesday night.

Mayor Nichols, Oakman, Mulligan, and RuBino were united behind regional planning and they said so.

Even planning skeptic Craigie S. Perkins said he hopes that city voters vote to join the planning commission in March.

But Perkins, joined by a member of the audience — Alderman Howard Douglas — spent most of the evening taking potshots at the supporters of Regional Planning.

Douglas and Perkins fear that the planning commission is just the first step in a process that will see the federal government forcing more and more conditions on communities for receiving federal aid.

A lively discussion developed on the pros and cons of planning. But what was probably the most memorable statement made during the evening was made by Mulligan:

"You've seen what has happened in Los Angeles and in the sprawling metropolises to the south," he said. "But you seem to think it can't happen here."

"But it can and it will if we don't plan now to make our communities what we want them to be in the years ahead," he said.

Once again, RuBino the state's representative had difficulty selling planning as an idea. After the meeting, Regional Planning's best selling point in Rutland still remained that the city must join the commission in March to obtain federal funds for sewer and water projects.

Rutland Restaurant Upsets Mount Holly In Adult Basketball

Gary Miller's 30 points paced Rutland Restaurant to a 77-73 upset of previously undefeated Mount Holly in the Rutland Adult League Tuesday evening. Mount Holly had a string of eight straight victories.

Ray Reilly's scored a 65-61 come-from-behind decision over the Professors in their Tuesday evening action.

Mount Holly, trailing slightly much of the contest, saw its one-point lead of three periods go up in smoke when fouls took three starters with only one reserve on the bench.

Mount Holly lost Olney, W. Cole and J. Cole before the contest was over. Only St. Peter fouled out for the Restaurant five.

Pool Plans Still A Vague Mystery

State's March 15 Deadline Draws Near, But No Reports of Progress Have Been Made Public by the Local Chamber's Secretive Committee.

By HOWARD COFFIN

"We hope to break ground in the spring," said former Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce Director Bernard L. Roach almost a year ago. But 12 months after that statement was made, the land at the White Playground is still undisturbed.

"We're making progress," said a member of the chamber's Swimming Pool Committee Friday. But a look at the White Playground, the pool's proposed location, showed Friday that Rutland's hoped-for new swimming pool was still as far away as it was the day that Roach predicted a pool last year.

Exactly where pool progress now stands is a mystery known only to the pool committee.

Its job has been a frustrating one. The committee has suffered many setbacks. Apparently another difficulty has arisen.

But the committee isn't talking. Members say they are making progress and hope to have a meeting soon — and all the time March 15 draws closer.

That date is the state's deadline imposed on Rutland. The city must by that time provide matching funds of about $56,000 or lose an equal amount of money the state has set aside as aid to the pool for the current fiscal year.

The Pool Committee's last public action was a trip to Vergennes to look at a gunnite swimming pool.

The gunnite pool has several structural advantages over normal concrete pools. But the chief feature, in the committee's eyes, is the plans for the pool, given for no preliminary charge.

The committee hopes to get Rutland's share of the pool's cost from a trust fund established under the will of Mrs. E. W. White. The fund provides funds for the "maintenance and improvement" of the White Playground.

The controllers of the trust fund have asked to see detailed plans and specifications of the proposed pool before deciding whether to grant any funds.

The committee has no money to pay for any plans at the present time. The cost of plans could run as high as $8,000.

The gunnite pool seemed to be the answer. The committee could get the plans from its manufacturer without a penny charge. The plans could go to the trust fund executors. If the executors approved the plans, the city could tell the state that it had its share of the pool's cost.

The plans could be paid for after the committee had its $100,000-plus for its pool.

Apparently, things have not turned out to be that simple. A disagreement exists somewhere. One source has said that the state doesn't favor the gunnite pools.

The pool committee may be arguing over the type of pool to be built.

Recently, there has been talk that the pool committee will have to ask the Board of Aldermen for a portion of the pool's cost.

Some private speculation has indicated that the trust fund executors may not be willing to hand over all of the city's estimated $56,000 share of the pool's cost.

Some reports say that the committee is considering asking city voters to approve a bond issue for part of the pool's cost.

If a bond issue is being considered, the indication would be that the trust fund's executors may be tightening up their purse strings.

The state's current deadline is conveniently set at one week after the March elections.

The present city pool on North Main Street has been overcrowded for years.

The pool is old and in need of repairs.

The Pool Committee was formed in August, 1936, and the committee had high hopes of building a pool for the summer of 1936.

Although committee meetings are theoretically open to the press, the committee has maintained a policy of announcing its meetings to its members only.

Before a meeting in April last year, the committee's chairman, Dr. Donald Iken, announced that the meeting was closed to reporters. The meeting was finally opened at the last moment.

Similar tactics have been tried by the committee since then.

Gunnite Pool Causes Ruckus

Jeffrey Doesn't Like That Type of Pool, But Pool Committee Does.

By HOWARD COFFIN

The refusal of the Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce's swimming pool committee to adhere to a recommendation from Vermont Director of Recreation Howard Jeffrey may have cut the cost of Rutland's proposed new swimming pool by nearly $50,000.

The pool committee has, for several months, been convinced that Rutland should build a gunnite type of pool for its new swimming pool.

Investigation by the pool committee had convinced them that the gunnite pool is not only about $30,000 cheaper, but is as good or better than reinforced concrete pools.

The committee submitted preliminary plans for a gunnite type of pool to the state many months ago.

On Jan. 4, Jeffrey wrote Mayor Harold J. Nichols saying that the city should not consider gunnite pools.

Jeffrey said that Dr. M. Alexander Gabrielson of New York University, the author of a book called "Sports and Recreation Facilities for School and Community," had said:

"A gunnite pool can be installed when you have a custom installation, but never north of New Jersey."

The letter was a blow to the Rutland Pool Committee.

Jeffrey recommended construction of a reinforced concrete type of pool in his letter. Such a pool would cost about $80,000 more than the estimated $172,000 price of a gunnite pool.

The pool committee was not satisfied with Jeffrey's statements.

A copy of his letter was forwarded to the Paddock Pool Builders Company of Albany, N. Y., builders of gunnite pools.

The result of the letter to the company, was a letter from Paddock Pool's president to Gov. Philip H. Hoff.

The president's letter charged that:

— Jeffrey had condemned the efforts of the community of Vergennes that is building a gunnite pool using public and private funds.

— Jeffrey had denied the state Recreation Department's co-operation and the availability of federal funds to Rutland if they chose to build a gunnite pool.

— Jeffrey had used out of context statements to sway a lay committee — The Rutland Swimming Pool Committee — to his viewpoint.

(An informed source said Thursday that Dr. Alexander, who was quoted by Jeffrey, had denied his statement that gunnite pools should not be built in the north.)

— Jeffrey had publicly condemned the gunnite pool business which the letter said is generally recognized as the largest and most respected builder of commercial pools in the northeast.

The letter from the Paddock Company president asked that the governor make a thorough investigation of the matter.

A spokesman for the Rutland Swimming Pool Committee said Thursday that the committee is proceeding with plans to build a gunnite type of pool here.

The pool committee met Thursday afternoon at the city Chamber of Commerce offices.

After the meeting, it appeared that city voters may be asked to foot the city's share of the pool's bill.

The committee hopes that the city's bill will be for only one-fourth of the total pool's cost, or about $28,000.

A bill is soon to be introduced to the Vermont House that would increase state aid to projects such as Rutland's swimming pool project.

With passage of the bill, the city would have to pay only a quarter of the pool's cost.

The city now is faced with raising 50 per cent of the pool's bill.

The committee has hoped to get the city's share of the cost from a trust fund set up for the White Playground. It was disclosed Thursday that the city will have to go to chancery court to release money from the fund for a pool.

The committee also discussed the possibility of trying to raise

(See Page 28: Pool)

Pool

Rutland's share of pool cost by subscription.

The pool committee apparently has gone about as far as it can go.

The pool matter will probably be turned over to the Board of Aldermen soon.

The committee is ready to recommend that a gunnite pool be built.

The state is reserving federal funds to cover half of the pool cost for Rutland.

But the city won't get that money until it can match the federal government's offer.

Apparently the aldermen will have to decide how to get that money.

The state has set a deadline on the city of March 15 for producing its share of the pool's cost.

If the bill authorizing more state aid to recreation projects is passed, the aldermen may well decide to put a bond issue in the March ballot, asking for about $28,000 for the pool.

If the bill doesn't pass, the city's share will be about $56,000, and the city may decide to go to chancery court to try to free money from the White Trust Fund.

Just what will happen was not clear Thursday night.

What was clear was that the Pool Committee of the Chamber of Commerce is fully agreed on the need for a pool. It was also clear that most of the blame for any delay in getting that pool built does not fall on their shoulders.

Many Attend Rites For Atty. Edwin W. Lawrence

State and Local Officials and Lawyers From All Over State Present at Trinity Episcopal Church Tuesday for Funeral of Prominent Benefactor, Philanthropist.

The funeral of Atty. Edwin W. Lawrence, 85, was conducted Friday with all the ritual of the Episcopal Church, of which he was a member.

Trinity Episcopal Church was crowded with many city and state officials, members of the Rutland County Bar Association, Addison County Bar Association, and officers and employees of several Rutland business concerns, who came to pay their last respects to one of Rutland's most generous benefactors.

The Vermont Supreme Court justices attended the service in a group. Lt. Gov. John J. Daley attended as the representative of the state and of Gov. Philip H. Hoff.

Also attending the services were officials of the Rutland Free Library and the Rutland Recreation Department. Both organizations were the recipients of large gifts from Atty. Lawrence during his lifetime.

As the funeral-goers filed into the church, the somber tones of funeral music mingled with the slow pealing of Trinity Church's chimes.

The procession, preceded by a white-robed crossbearer, led the pallbearers and the casket, which was covered by a black scarf, toward the center of the church.

The casket was set in the church's center, surrounded by six lighted candles.

The Rev. Donald Webster, pastor of the church, conducted the service, reading from the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer:

"We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing away."

"The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

After the responsive reading of Psalms, Father Webster said in prayer: "Receive our humble petitions for the soul of thy servant Edwin..."

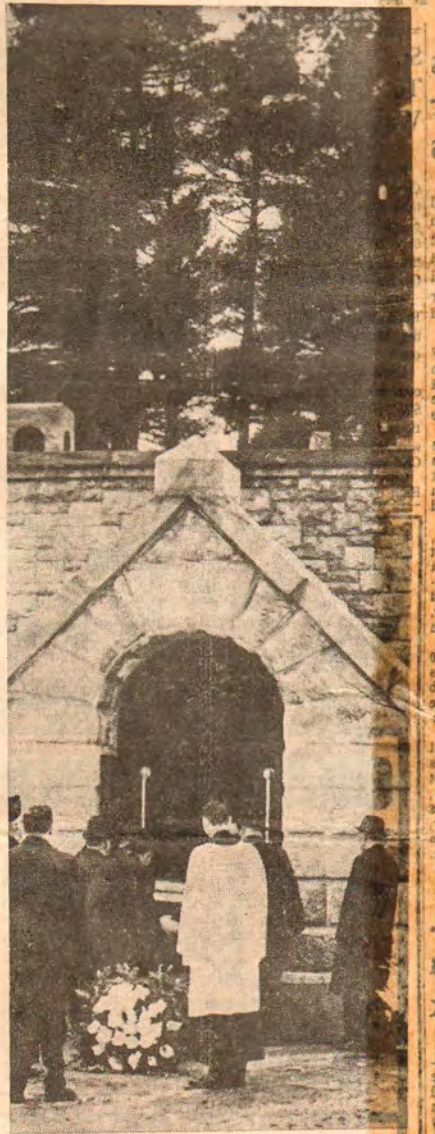

Following the conclusion of the ceremony, Atty. Lawrence's body was taken to Evergreen Cemetery and entombed, with Father Webster officiating at the committal service.

The Rev. John W. Nourse and the Rev. Brendan J. Whitaker Jr. assisted in the funeral and committal services.

Bearers were Atty. Donald M. French, Harry R. Hart, Atty. George F. Jones, Atty. Robinson E. Keyes, George G. Smith, and Judge Richard F. Sullivan, all of Rutland.

Representatives of the University of Vermont, Middlebury College, the Central Vermont Public Service Corp., the Vermont Bank and Trust Co., the Rutland County office of the Howard National Bank, the Marble Savings Bank, and the Rutland Savings Bank attended.

Organist was Horace M. Hollister. Ushers were Robert C. Kinney, Atty. R. Clarke

Atty. Edwin W. Lawrence Dies Saturday at Age 83

Lawyer and Philanthropist Was Benefactor for City and for Colleges.

Atty. Edwin W. Lawrence, one of Rutland's most generous benefactors and philanthropists, died Saturday at 1:10 p.m. of a cerebral thrombosis and complications. He was 83.

Atty. Lawrence had been taken to Rutland Hospital last week and underwent an emergency operation Wednesday night for a bleeding ulcer, Dr. Edward J. Layden, the surgeon, said.

Atty. Lawrence was one of Rutland's most highly-honored citizens, and had received many awards for his large contributions to Rutland charities, and community activities.

The most well-known results of his philanthropy were located at the intersection of Court and Center Streets.

There, the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center, which was given to Rutland by Atty. Lawrence, and the recently completed addition to the Rutland Free Library, toward which he contributed $30,000, are located.

In addition to these two structures, the Rutland lawyer contributed extensively to many city charities, to the University of Vermont in Burlington, and to Middlebury College.

He founded the Lawrence Debate Club at UVM, and contributed large sums over the years to the support of this organization and other debate and speech activities.

In 1964, Atty. Lawrence was named the outstanding member of the Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce, "in recognition of his generosity for providing recreation and library facilities for the youth of the community."

In 1965, Atty. Lawrence received the Rutland Teachers Association annual award for the citizen who has done the most for Rutland schools.

His gift in 1963 enabled the city to purchase the former Mead Community House and remodel it for the present recreation center.

John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of Rutland recreation and parks, said Sunday:

"I was deeply saddened to hear of the death of Mr. Lawrence. His loss will be felt by the young people of this community, because of Mr. Lawrence's keen and continuing interest in our youth."

"He always wanted the best for the young people of Rutland," Cioffredi concluded.

Both in the case of the recreation center and the library addition, Atty. Lawrence's contributions came after city voters had voted against spending city money for the projects.

"However, recognizing the city's need, particularly for its children," said the 1963 edition of the City Report, "Mr. Lawrence made his gift to the city."

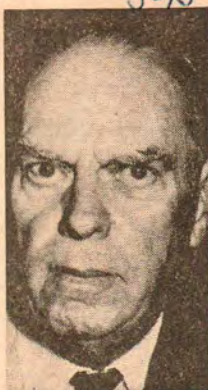

The report was dedicated to Atty. Lawrence.

Atty. Lawrence was appointed clerk of the office of U. S. Sen. Redfield Proctor in 1902, shortly after his admission to the Vermont Bar. In 1903, he became assistant attorney in the Post Office Department, assistant attorney in the Department of Justice, and a special attorney to the Attorney General of the United States.

In 1906 he returned to Rutland as general attorney for the Rutland Railroad. He retained that position until 1960. During those years, he also conducted his private law practice and extensive business dealings.

He was elected Rutland County Senator in 1923 and 1925, and served for many years as a trustee of the University of Vermont.

He was also a director of

the Central Vermont Public Service Corp., the Vermont Bank and Trust Co., the Killington Bank and Trust Co., of which he was vice president, and the Rutland Trust Co., of which he was president.

Atty. Lawrence was born March 27, 1883, in Rutland. He was a member of Trinity Episcopal Church of the American Bar Association, the Vermont Bar Association, the Rutland County Bar Association, and the Rutland Lodge of Elks. Surviving are his widow, the former Florence Roby; a son, John Lawrence, of Dallas, Tex.; a daughter, Mrs. John S. Upham of Alexandria, Va.; seven grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday at Trinity Episcopal Church. Entombment will be at Evergreen Cemetery.

There will be no calling hours. In lieu of flowers, friends may send contributions to the memorial fund at Rutland Hospital.

Browne, the MSJ coach, led the Palms team to second straight city championship Sunday against West Rutland. Browne starred for the St. Michael's College team in 1958.

TALENT SHOW

To the Editor: I was interested in reading that the Recreation Department are to have another talent show.

Is it possible to make a suggestion?

We have many talented young people and are good sports but I think that this time they should have a fair and honest decision if they try again.

Yes, last year the jug band won. This decision was not approved by the talent scout. These young people brought all their fellow students who voted for them of course. No one had a chance.

I know that the group probably worked hard at their hobby but the whole idea to them was probably just fun for they knew that their hobby would not go very far in the entertainment world.

Many people were irked by the decision for there were very talented young people who should have had a chance.

Why can't a group who have no contestants together with the talent scout be the judge? And I think that the scout who knows talent should have the right to tell what he thinks and why.

I think some of our best talent may be missing if they won't have a chance according to ability.

Let's be fair this time.

Pool Plug Pulled (For Time Being)

City Officials Finally Bow Out and Tell the State Interagency Committee on Natural Resources to Release Cash; Will Resubmit a Bid in Summer.

(Vermont Press Bureau)

MONTEPELIER — Rutland's request to withdraw its application for $50,000 in federal matching funds for a new municipal swimming pool was approved Wednesday by the Interagency Committee on Natural Resources.

The city asked that the request be withdrawn, but indicated that it plans to re-submit the request again after July 1.

Development Commissioner Elbert G. Moulton, the vice chairman of the Interagency committee, said that Rutland should have its local matching money — $50,000 — "in hand" before coming back for federal funds.

The Interagency Committee is the state group which handles all Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation Funds.

Moulton said that the Interagency Committee has been holding on to the $50,000 for Rutland at the expense of other communities seeking municipal recreation projects.

Rutland officials were considering asking the voters for the money at the last election, but decided to wait because another bond issue for water system improvements was on the ballot.

In the meantime, Rutland officials have had a hard time coming up with the local matching money because of complications over a trust fund.

The interagency committee has been considering the Rutland request for about a year now.

Rutland officials said Wednesday that they believed that they would not have any trouble obtaining the $50,000 matching funds when they reapply sometime in April.

"We are not relinquishing the pool, but we could not come up with the matching funds by the March 15 deadline," Cliff Barnes, managing director of the Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce, said Wednesday.

Barnes said that members of the Chamber of Commerce Pool Committee felt that they should wait until a bill presently before the state senate is voted on.

(The bill, S-1013, could give the city an additional 25 per cent of the total cost of the pool, now estimated at $112,000.

(According to Barnes, if the state put up 25 per cent and the federal government paid 50 per cent, the city's cost would only be about $28,000.

(Dr. Donald Icken, chairman of the pool committee, said if they could get money from the state, the city would not have to bond for the remainder of the costs.

(Dr. Icken said that the city could possibly get the remainder of the pool's cost from the city trust fund for White Playground.

(Mayor Harold J. Nichols said that he thought the Senate bill to set aside money for the expansion or modernization of existing recreation facilities would be passed.

(Icken and Barnes said that the city would re-apply for the $50,000 federal grant even if the bill was defeated.

(The pool committee has apparently decided to seek the city's share of the pool's cost from the principle of the Rutland City Trust Fund. The city will have to go to chancery court to change the wording of the trust fund to get the money.

Otter Creek Preservation Wins Praise

By HOWARD COFFIN
(Vermont Press Bureau)

MONTPELIER. — A bill aimed at establishing Otter Creek as a "scenic waterway" restricted to the use of canoes and boats powered by small motors received strong support during a hearing in the House Thursday afternoon.

A delegation of Rutland City officials led a group of about 20 persons speaking in favor of the House bill.

The bill's supporters greatly outnumbered its opponents Thursday.

The bill is aimed at preserving the beauty of about 75 miles of Otter Creek from near its source in Dorset to where it empties into Lake Champlain near Vergennes.

The bill would allow only craft powered by muscle power or by motors of three horsepower or less to use the creek. Development would be restricted within 300 feet of the stream on each side in rural areas and within as little as 15 feet where it flows through towns and cities.

The bill was introduced into the House last week and sent to the House Natural Resources Committee for study.

Rep. Arthur Gibb, R-15, of Weybridge, committee chairman, and a co-sponsor of the bill along with Rep. Homer Ashland, R-21, of Rutland, conducted Thursday's hearing.

Rutland Alderman Craig S. Perkins spoke first among the delegation from Rutland. He stated that Rutland Mayor Harold J. Nichols is strongly in support of passage of the bill.

(See Page 10, Creek)

Creek

Perkins said: "The Otter Creek scenic waterway bill should help preserve the stream for the enjoyment of all the people rather than for the enrichment of the few."

Kenneth Webb, the owner of a children's camp in Plymouth, supported the bill as "a great boon to the camping movement."

Speaking for the State Camping Association he said, "We need a place where we can get away from the clutter of billboards and neon signs."

Dr. Homer Dodge of Burlington, president of the Canoe Cruisers Club of Northern Vermont said he would favor a waterway restricted to canoe use only. But he said that if motor powered boats are to be allowed, he recommended reducing the power limit from three to two horse power.

Gerald Pulling of the Rutland County office of the Soil Conservation Service, said that motors of three horse power, but no more, wouldn't disturb the stream banks.

Reinhold W. Thiems, commissioner of the Department of Water Resources, said that his department has classified Otter Creek as a Class C stream.

He explained that the classification means that the creek is suitable for all fish native to the region and for boating.

"Otter Creek is perfectly suitable for a canoe trail," he said.

Among the minority opposing passage of the bill were Rep. Katherine J. Heitman, R-68, of Shoreham, who argued that farmers would be denied the use of the land along the stream by the 300 foot corridor that would be created by the bill.

Gibb assured her that his committee has no intention of depriving any farmers of the use of any land along Otter Creek.

John Scott of the state's Plant and Pest Control Division, of the Agriculture Department, asked that the bill be rewritten to allow the creek to be regraded to promote the drainage of flood plains bordering the creek.

Scott said that still water that remains along the stream after spring floods attracts mosquitoes and causes a serious pest problem.

But Roger Seaman of the Fish and Game Department told Scott that as soon as he dug his drainage ditches, he would be right there with a shovel to fill them in.

He spoke in favor of preserving the creek in its natural state, as a wild fowl refuge.

Softball

All those interested in entering a team in either the Rutland City Softball League or the Rutland Recreation Softball League should meet at the Lawrence Recreation Center Wednesday evening.

The City League meeting will start at 7:30 p.m., followed by the Recreation League session at 8.

It is important that all teams interested in either league be at Wednesday's meetings to draw up schedules and decide on dues.

Still Time

Because school was recessed last week, John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of Rutland Recreation and Parks, has agreed to allow applicants for the Recreation Department's annual Talent Round-Up another week to sign up for the show.

The deadline for registration is now Monday, Cioffredi said. Auditions will begin that week, and the Talent Round-Up itself is scheduled for April 22.

The winner of the contest will go to New York City for an audition on the Ted Mack Amateur Hour.

Last year's contest winners, "The Plunk - Outs", a jug band from Castleton State College, appeared on the television show.

Cliff Barnes said that Otter Creek, if made a scenic waterway, would benefit the economy of the Rutland area.

"This would greatly help the recreation business," he said.

Rutland's Superintendent of Recreation John Cioffredi supported the bill.

Rep. Dwight E. Burnham, R-31, of Waltham, said he felt that the bill was unnecessary because most towns could control development along the stream by zoning.

The bill will prohibit along the banks of Otter Creek, junkyards, dumps, open storage of non-agricultural products, storage tanks, outdoor advertising signs, and dwellings.

The scenic waterway would begin at Emerald Lake in Dorset near the stream's source. It would continue northward on the creek for about 75 miles to Lake Champlain.

One speaker said Thursday that the creek would afford a canoe trip lasting from five to six days.

Openings

John Cioffredi, Rutland City recreation director, has announced a few openings remain in the summer softball leagues.

However, those interested in joining either of the two leagues must do so by the end of the week so proper schedules can be arranged.

Like Spring Peepers . . .

Summer Song

By TOM SLAYTON

Outside, the heavy snowflakes of a late-season sugar snowstorm were killed about by an icy April wind.

But inside Rotary Field House Monday night, there was ample evidence that summer wasn't so far away after all.

The Rutland City Band's members, with visions of warm summer nights in Main Street Park's bandstand flitting through their heads, were tuning up at their first practice session of 1967.

The band, America's oldest city band, has been entertaining summertime crowds in the park for years. For many Rutlanders, it is as much a part of summer as trips to Branbury Beach and a cold beer on a hot afternoon.

Likewise, the year's first practice session is regarded as one of spring's most reliable harbingers.

Conductor Raymond H. Brown tapped his baton on the music stand in front of him, and the band members swung into "The Sound of Music."

The music was a little shaky at first. Consultations followed.

"I don't think we're in tune with the first clarinets," one girl complained. Brown listened, made suggestions, and the errant notes were brought back into line.

"We'll just line it out tonight," Brown said. "I want to go over the tempo of some of these pieces with you."

As the spring snow deepened in the lawn outside Rotary Field House, the collation of flutes, French horns, trumpets, drums, clarinets, and saxophones did just that.

The brassy music filled the field house, and summer seemed a lot closer, even if there were three inches of new snow piling up in the parking lot.

Visions of a humid, green Main Street Park filled with chattering teenagers, strolling couples, and older Rutlanders relaxing on the grass were hard to conjure up in the blowing snow outside.

But once inside the bright music-filled room, that vision came a lot closer. All the precedent is on the city band's side, April snow or no.

Summer is almost a certainty with a score of trumpets and drums backing you up.

It will be the city band's 80th continuous season.

Teen Dance

The Crosswords, a rock 'n' roll group, will provide the music Friday from 8 to 11 p.m. for the Rutland Recreation Department's weekly teen dance, set for the Lawrence Recreation Center.

The new teen step expected to be introduced this week is The Missing Mitch, a dance described as "one which never quite made it."

Fabric Lining Is Favored For City Pool

A veteran Rutland architect, Payson R. Webber, offered a possible solution Tuesday to the problems of leaks and cracks at Rutland's old municipal swimming pool.

Webber, who has been in consultation with John W. Cloutier, superintendent of the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department, suggested mopping a new waterproof membrane of asphalt-saturated fabrics on the bottom.

A thin layer of concrete, possibly three inches thick, would be laid over the membrane, Webber said.

Webber, who has worked on the problems of the pool in the past, personally recommended the fabric idea over the old method of filling in the cracks with patching plaster.

He said, however, that the fabric would be the most expensive project. But he said he believed that it would be the best solution in the long run.

Webber said he feels the filling of the cracks of the 37-year-old pool would only help for about a year.

The Rutland architect was not able to offer a cost estimate for the proposal at this time. He said more consultation with contractors would be needed.

Webber reported no apparent leakage from the main pipes at the pool on North Main Street.

Leakage testing has recently been done at the pool, and it seemed to indicate no big problems with the pipes.

Cloutier promised Tuesday that all is being done to ensure the opening of the pool this year by Memorial Day.

The Recreation Department chief also said that he has looked into the question of water circulation.

"Every effort is being made to assure the opening of the pool," Cloutier added. He agreed it will take "time and money" to correct the situation.

Children's Hour Temporarily Ended Downtown

McClallen's Lunch Counter Placed Off Limits During Afternoon for Teenagers.

The Children's Hour is ended — for the time being, anyway.

Since Friday, McClallen's Lunch Counter has been off limits from 2:45 to 4:15 p.m. daily to teenagers.

Marty McClallen, manager, asked the principals of Rutland High School and Mount St. Joseph Academy to read the announcement over the school's public address systems last week.

McClallen blamed damages and revenue losses for the decision.

"We had $130 in damages to the furniture here because of kids leaning back in the chairs, putting their feet on the tables, and just fooling around."

"We had to empty the sugar bowls after they left each day, because they almost always had salt in them," he said.

McClallen, who looks almost young enough to be one of the banned teenagers, also said that the presence of the teenagers drove adult customers away.

"Since we put the ban on, we've picked up about $10 in that time stretch. That may not sound like much, but it adds up over a year."

He said that his teenage customers would spend only from $3 to $5 each day.

McClallen also said that his father, Charles McClallen, was forced in 1965 to close the establishment from 2:30 to 4 p.m. each day in order to avoid the crush.

Teens were also blamed when Braves Restaurant on Merchants Row closed in the late 1950's.

Other downtown restaurants attempt to discourage the after-school teenage trade, but none of them had a problem the size of McClallen's.

Teenagers not engaged in athletics or after-school activities, are now limited to the Lawrence Recreation Center for after-school pursuits. A juke box, a soda machine, and pool and ping-pong tables are available there until 5 p.m.

But the same problems often occur at the center. John Cloutier, recreation department superintendent, said Thursday that the Teen Room has to have an adult supervisor present to discourage damage to the equipment.

But McClallen's was as quiet as a library at 3 p.m. Thursday, the normal hour for the teenage rush. Some adult customers were sipping coffee when four teenage girls, apparently unaware of the edict, walked in with transistor radios and took seats.

McClallen quietly asked them to leave, which they reluctantly did.

"I hate to do it," he said. "But we've got to stay in business."

Tony Dolphin Dies Wednesday at 74; Was City's Most Prominent Sportsman

Umpired Thousands of Ball Games in Rutland Area During Sports Career.

The "man behind the plate" for two generations of Rutland baseball players died Wednesday morning at Rutland Hospital.

Soft-spoken Anthony G. (Tony) Dolphin, for years a baseball umpire in Rutland and northern New England, and long prominent in Rutland sports circles, was 74.

Mr. Dolphin was born in Portugal in 1893 and came to the United States when he was 6. He was a 1909 graduate of Tabor Academy in Marion, Mass., and attended the University of Vermont.

He retired from the Rutland Railway in 1961 after 32 years of service. He made his home at 102 S. Main St.

Mr. Dolphin is survived by his widow, the former Mary Gammilla; a daughter, Mrs. Gwendolyn Allen of Rutland; six sons, Anthony L. Dolphin of Phoenix, Ariz., Llewellyn F. Dolphin of Terryville, Conn., Anthony G. Dolphin Jr., and James R. Dolphin, both of Rutland, Robert J. Dolphin of Albany, N. Y., and Edward H. Dolphin of Hackensack, N. J.; 25 grandchildren; and 13 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. at Christ the King Church. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Friends may call at the Clifford Funeral Home Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. and Friday from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.

When Tony Dolphin was a football star at UVM, before World War I, his team was taking a 33-0 beating at the hands of Brown University one Saturday, and most of the UVM players had given up for the day.

But Dolphin believed in playing the game. When a Brown halfback came through the line, Dolphin was the only UVM player between the runner and the goal line. "Well," he said to himself, "it's him or it's me," and headed straight at the runner. Dolphin woke up in the hospital, but the Brown player never scored.

TONY DOLPHIN

Dolphin always gave everything he had to the game, from his performances as a semi-pro catcher on Cape Cod around 1910, to his performances as a baseball umpire and college football referee, until his retirement in 1962.

Among many well-known players with whom he was associated over the years were Robin Roberts, Ebba St. Clair, Walt Lanfranconi, Snuffy

Was Football, Baseball Star at University of Vermont Before WW I.

Sternweiss, Lew Beberette, and Johnny Antonelli.

But it was as a baseball umpire that Dolphin was best known in this area. He took it up in the 1920's and didn't give it up officially until 1962. And even after that, he wasn't against taking a turn behind the plate, if there was a quick call for an umpire.

High school games, Legion games, scratch sandlot games — he adjudicated them all with equal aplomb.

His reputation was so great that he sometimes was called on to settle disputes even when he wasn't officially part of the game.

For years he used to walk from his South Main Street home to the railroad yards, by way of Center Street and the Meldon School yard.

Once some youngsters were playing ball in the Meldon yard, and a close play came at second base just as Dolphin came strolling across the diamond on his way to work. The disputants appealed to Dolphin for a decision.

(See Page 28: Mr. Dolphin)

"He's out," said Dolphin, without breaking his stride, and the decision stuck.

Dolphin had the knack that any good umpire has of capitalizing on the tenseness of a close game for dramatic effect.

Early in the game he would call the balls and strikes in a casual manner. But when the tension mounted and every pitch counted, he would watch the throw, and then drop his hand close to the ground.

Starting in a growl and ending in a shout, he would say:

"Str-i-i-i-i-i-i-ke!" bringing his fist clear over his head and twisting his entire body around.

His son Tony Jr. also became an umpire, and a Dolphin-Dolphin team called the shots at most high school, and American Legion games in the area.

Dolphin was also an umpire in the old Northern Baseball League and referee in pro football games in the Whitehall-Granville, N.Y., area. He also coached sports for the old St. Peter's Parish Athletic Club.

Much of the behind-the-scenes work in organizing the Rutland Bulldogs, a semi-pro baseball team in the mid-1930's, was accomplished by Dolphin.

In 1962, he was lauded by the Rutland Elks Club for his service to the youth of Rutland.

But Tony Dolphin was more comfortable behind the plate than behind a banquet table. When his son Ed made his very first trip to bat for Mount St. Joseph Academy, Dolphin calmly called him out on strikes.

Many frustrated ballplayers complained that Dolphin was weak on low pitches. He always replied with a smile:

"You just can't hit a low pitch — and if you don't like it, you're still out."

Fair, Windy

A sunny, fair day with winds of 15 miles per hour from the north was forecast Friday for Saturday morning's kite-flying contest at White Playground.

The 9 a.m. event, is being sponsored by the Rutland Kite Flyer's Benevolent Association and the Rutland Recreation Department.

All Rutland area children are invited to join in the fun, according to John W. Cioffredi, Recreation Department superintendent. All types of kites are eligible to be entered and children of all ages may compete.

Contests include a 40-yard dash, an altitude contest, an accuracy contest, a kite battle, and a most original kite contest. Prizes will be awarded in all categories.

Saturday's activity is the second annual kite contest sponsored by the RKFA.

High-Flying Fun At Rutland Kite Contest

Although the trees in White Playground were gaily wrapped with kites Saturday, enough kids managed to get them up and keep them flying long enough to pull off prizes in Rutland's second annual kite flying contest.

The event was sponsored by the Rutland Kite Flyer's Benevolent Association and the Rutland Recreation Department.

In the girls' 40-yard dash contest, Ann Baron won the pee-wee division, Kathy Biggs won in the midget category, and Mary Merchant took juniors honors.

Wayne Gennette won the 40-yard dash for pee-wees, Kevin West won in the midget bracket, and John Edwards won in the junior division.

Greg Kalil won the altitude contest for boys and Windy Cotropi won in the girls' bracket.

The most original kite design award went to Robbie Lash. John Hamill won the kite battle.

A Tale of Ditches, Parks and Elms—Spring Cleaning

For the City Recreation Department, It's an Annual Task They Face.

By MERLE F. JACKSON

Rutland's Department of Recreation and Parks, Department of Public Works, and a local U.S. conservationist teamed up Monday to begin solving a wet ball field problem at Rotary Field.

John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation and Parks Department, said a new drainage pipe ditch now being dug at Rotary Field is his department's biggest project during its current spring clean-up period.

Harold W. Pulling, the local U. S. Soil conservationist, joined Cioffredi Monday afternoon at the field to inspect the work done by DPW employees Fred Dutelle and Albert Bonilla, along with Recreation Department employee Gabby Kessop and his helper, Tom Eddy, a Rutland High School student on vacation this week.

However, it wasn't all old-time ditch digging Monday, thanks to a modern ditch digging machine.

The ditch will be about 600 feet long when completed.

Cioffredi said his department has been involved in spring cleaning for some time.

The work includes:

— Raking and removing the remains of dead trees, mainly elms, from the Main Street Park area.

— Purchasing new playground equipment for Rutland's three playgrounds, White, Meadow Street, and Rotary Field.

— Planning for the planting of new trees to replace the dead trees.

One big problem relating to Main Street Park is the need to wait and see when work will start on the new tourist booth to be located there, Cioffredi stated.

Cliff Barnes, executive director of the Rutland Regional Chamber of Commerce, reported late Monday the chamber's "Young Executives' Club" recently took on the new booth as a project.

Barnes said he expects some news on the actual work on the booth soon. Only the foundation is now laid for the booth.

One big part of spring cleaning — the removal of dead trees — is completed, Cioffredi stated.

The new trees planted last year and those to be planted in the future will be of two types, he said. They will be shade and flower trees. In addition, the department will continue to plant shrubs.

The plantings will take place as soon as the weather permits and the plans of the chamber are known, he said.

Cioffredi expressed hopes Monday that the new drainage ditch at Rotary Field will help solve a long standing problem there.

The ditch will carry the excess water in the area into a nearby brook. The pipe begins near the Rutland Municipal Swimming Pool and borders the Rotary

Ball field on its way to the brook.

Another example of the recreation department's spring work is the "sealing" planned for the blacktop at the Rotary Field tennis courts. The sealing helps prevent cracks from developing on the court.

Cioffredi also said Rutland's old swimming pool isn't forgotten. Testing for leaks is an annual spring rite there. There are hopes that the city will soon boast a new pool.

William Reardon and his high school helpers have also been working on the grooming of the parks and ball fields.

TALENT ROUND-UP

To the Editor: The third annual Talent Round-Up, sponsored by the Recreation Department, will be Saturday evening, April 22, at the Lawrence Recreation Center. There are some with mistaken ideas about how this contest operates. Over the past year, several letters have appeared in this column and I will attempt to clarify the issues.

1. The primary purpose of this program is to give all persons in the area, who have talent and like to perform, a chance to do so. The idea of a contest was of secondary importance when this program was first conceived by John Cioffredi and Robert Laird, then a member of the Board of Alderman's Recreation Committee.

2. Mr. Stan Early, the representative from Ted Mack's Amateur Hour, who attended last year's show, stated definitely that he would not be a judge. The choice of a winner must be purely a local decision.

3. Mr. Early did not disagree with the choice of the judges, who selected "The Plunkouts". To bear this out—they did appear on Ted Mack's show, whereas winning this contest only guarantees an audition.

4. The audience has no part in electing the winners. Each year the committee gives careful consideration to selecting three qualified judges, with varied experience in this field of entertainment. (Incidentally, these judges donate their time, as do the rest of us who work on this project.) The judges, independently of each other, score each act as it appears and tally the results at the end of the program.

It is interesting to note, that in listening to the people who objected to last year's winners, each had a different person as their choice. No panel of judges could possibly please everyone. A contest of this type requires the same good sportsmanship necessary to any contest of any kind.

We hope the people in the Rutland area will stand behind the Recreation Department, the contestants, and the judges, and come out Saturday evening and enjoy what we feel is a very worthwhile project for our young people.

Beautifying Rutland

Rutland's park beautification program sometimes seems to be a losing battle, despite the persistent efforts of Superintendent John Cioffredi who has been leading the campaign for several years now against obstacles that would have discouraged a less dedicated field commander.

Many Vermont communities have embarked on beautification programs with high hopes and great zeal only to give up in frustration when the original promoters became discouraged usually because of lack of public interest and the depredations of vandals.

It has been proved repeatedly that more is needed than the devoted efforts of garden club workers and a park supervisor who refuses to give up.

Mainly, perhaps, the additional ingredient required is a public sense of pride in the appearance of the community which must extend to children as well as adults. It takes time to establish a beautification tradition in any community and it is something that involves a great deal more than the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers.

For one thing, it means the elimination of eyesores like the Morris Inn on West Street which stands as a mocking challenge to all efforts to beautify Rutland. No community which really took pride in its appearance would have tolerated the presence of such a structure so long after it was condemned.

The Morris Inn is not the only blemish on the Rutland landscape, but it is the one which has caused the most criticism because it adjoins an elementary school playground.

Other equally unpleasant eyesores are overlooked every day because their location is no menace to school children — they are only a blight on the appearance of the city.

Rutland parks and playgrounds can be beautified ad infinitum, but the program will not instill pride in Rutland's appearance unless other measures are taken to eliminate structures which have been abandoned and are tumbling down along the streets of Rutland.

Dance

Music by "The Continentals" will spark the Rutland Recreation Department's Friday night dance at the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center.

Expected to be announced is the latest teen dance step, "The Secret Camp," a recent discovery.

The dance will begin at 8 p.m. and continue until 11 p.m.

Coup Planned At City Hall, But All's Well

Patrolman Gene Roussil said that the city government would be overthrown Wednesday.

Then he quickly added that it will all be a part of Rutland's annual Youth Day, sponsored each year by Rutland Elks Lodge No. 345.

Students of Rutland High School and Mount St. Joseph Academy will be filling the chairs of the city's administrators, putting the oldtimers out to temporary pasture.

Beginning at 2 p.m. Wednesday, MSJ students will hold these positions: Louis Tesconi, mayor; Peter Carbine, John Dow, Anthony Merchand, Arlene Bloodworth, and George Hooker, aldermen; Michael Denmore, commissioner of public works; Carl Frankiewicz, fire chief; Kathy Pellegrino, assessor; Linda Welk, director of civil defense; Anna Cassorino, city attorney; Ann Marie Castle, building inspector, and Michael Carroll, tax collector.

RHS students will hold these positions: Thomas Field, police chief; Michael Rosenberg, recreation director; Carol Laddard, director of welfare; Jodee Bishop, municipal judge; Michelle Munsat, city clerk; Mark Davis, city treasurer, and Gregory Lamb, Thomas Wolk, Dorothy Stoops, Carl Hinsman, Susan Dick, and Catherine MacFarlane, aldermen.

Following their day in office, the students will be guests at a banquet at the Rutland Elks Lodge. William Atkins, Rutland school superintendent, will be the guest speaker.

Following the dinner, five students will be presented awards for scholastic and youth leadership. Louis Tesconi, MSJ and Joan Burke of RHS, will receive $100 savings bonds. They were selected as outstanding youth leaders, based on their participation in extracurricular activities.

First place in scholastic honors will go to Mary Margaret Fagan of MSJ, who will receive a $100 bond; Cecil E. Maranville of Wallingford High School, a $50 bond, and Nicholas A. La Vecchia, RHS, a $25 bond.

Roussil, Youth Day chairman, said that some 100 people will be expected at the banquet.

A Tale of Ditches, Parks and Elms—Spring Cleaning

For the City Recreation Department, It's an Annual Task They Face.

By MERLE F. JACKSON

Rutland's Department of Recreation and Parks, Department of Public Works, and a local U.S. conservationist teamed up Monday to begin solving a wet ball field problem at Rotary Field.

John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation and Parks Department, said a new drainage pipe ditch now being dug at Rotary Field is his department's biggest project during its current spring clean-up period.

Harold W. Pulling, the local U. S. Soil conservationist, joined Cioffredi Monday afternoon at the field to inspect the work done by DPW employees Fred Dutelle and Albert Bonilla, along with Recreation Department employee Gabby Kessop and his helper, Tom Eddy, a Rutland High School student on vacation this week.

However, it wasn't all old-time ditch digging Monday, thanks to a modern ditch digging machine.

The ditch will be about 600 feet long when completed.

Cioffredi said his department has been involved in spring cleaning for some time.

The work includes:

— Raking and removing the remains of dead trees, mainly elms, from the Main Street Park area.

— Purchasing new playground equipment for Rutland's three playgrounds, White Meadow Street, and Rotary Field.

— Planning for the planting of new trees to replace the dead trees.

One big problem relating to Main Street Park is the need to wait and see when work will start on the new tourist booth to be located there, Cioffredi stated.

Cliff Barnes, executive director of the Rutland Regional Chamber of Commerce, reported late Monday the chamber's "Young Executives' Club" recently took on the new booth as a project.

Barnes said he expects some news on the actual work on the booth soon. Only the foundation is now laid for the booth.

One big part of spring cleaning — the removal of dead trees — is completed, Cioffredi stated.

The new trees planted last year and those to be planted in the future will be of two types, he said. They will be shade and flower trees. In addition, the department will continue to plant shrubs.

The plantings will take place as soon as the weather permits and the plans of the chamber are known, he said.

Cioffredi expressed hopes Monday that the new drainage ditch at Rotary Field will help solve a long standing problem there.

The ditch will carry the excess water in the area into a nearby brook. The pipe begins near the Rutland Municipal Swimming Pool and borders the Rotary

Ball field on its way to the brook.

Another example of the recreation department's spring work is the "sealing" planned for the blacktop at the Rotary Field tennis courts. The sealing helps prevent cracks from developing on the court.

Cioffredi also said Rutland's old swimming pool isn't forgotten. Testing for leaks is an annual spring rite there. There are hopes that the city will soon boast a new pool.

William Reardon and his high school helpers have also been working on the grooming of the parks and ball fields.

TALENT ROUND-UP

To the Editor: The third annual Talent Round-Up, sponsored by the Recreation Department, will be Saturday evening, April 22, at the Lawrence Recreation Center. There are some with mistaken ideas about how this contest operates. Over the past year, several letters have appeared in this column and I will attempt to clarify the issues.

1. The primary purpose of this program is to give all persons in the area, who have talent and like to perform, a chance to do so. The idea of a contest was of secondary importance when this program was first conceived by John Cioffredi and Robert Laird, then a member of the Board of Alderman's Recreation Committee.

2. Mr. Stan Early, the representative from Ted Mack's Amateur Hour, who attended last year's show, stated definitely that he would not be a judge. The choice of a winner must be purely a local decision.

3. Mr. Early did not disagree with the choice of the judges, who selected "The Plunkouts". To bear this out—they did appear on Ted Mack's show, whereas winning this contest only guarantees an audition.

4. The audience has no part in electing the winners. Each year the committee gives careful consideration to selecting three qualified judges, with varied experience in this field of entertainment. (Incidentally, these judges donate their time, as do the rest of us who work on this project.) The judges, independently of each other, score each act as it appears and tally the results at the end of the program.

It is interesting to note, that in listening to the people who objected to last year's winners, each had a different person as their choice. No panel of judges could possibly please everyone. A contest of this type requires the same good sportsmanship necessary to any contest of any kind.

We hope the people in the Rutland area will stand behind the Recreation Department, the contestants, and the judges, and come out Saturday evening and enjoy what we feel is a very worthwhile project for our young people.

Colorful Request to Citizens By Local Park Superintendent

Rutland's park superintendent has a colorful request to make to city residents.

The superintendent, John Cioffredi, asked Friday that park users cooperate in his park beautification program.

"With Expo 67 coming up a lot of tourists are going to be passing Main Street Park, and we want to make a good impression," Cioffredi said.

He explained that cooperation from the public is necessary to let newly planted trees, shrubs, and flowers grow.

"This spring, we found a lot of damage to the shrubs we planted last year — and it was caused by children, not winter," he said.

"We need the support of the public," Cioffredi said. "After all, it's their park."

To help protect the plants and trees, Cioffredi has received permission from the Board of Aldermen to erect No-Ball-Playing signs in Main Street Park.

"The playgrounds are for ball playing," he said. "We want the park for other uses."

Cioffredi explained that the planting program is the second stage in a long-range beautification program. In the first stage, new permanent park benches were installed and park fixtures were given a fresh coat of paint.

For the planting stage, the Rutland Florists Association is supplying and planting flowers free of charge.

Another free boost was given by Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, which planted a bed of yellow roses in Main Street Park. Trees will also be pruned this year.

Cioffredi explained that flowering shrubs, evergreen trees, and shade and flowering trees will be planted in the park and in the city's three playgrounds — White, Rotary and Meadow Street.

"We've already planted some flowering crab trees and mountain ash trees," he said. Other species to be planted include red leaf maple, Norway maple, and variegated maple.

Shrub types include flowering quince, almond, bridal wreath, honeysuckle, dogwood, and forsythia.

Midget League

Registration blanks for participation in the Rutland Recreation Department's sponsored Midget League, for boys 10-12, will be available in city schools Tuesday.

If a youngster doesn't get his registration card in school, he should go to the recreation office after school to pick one up.

All boys wishing to play Midget League ball this summer, whether they played last year or not, must complete the new registration form. These must be turned in by Friday.

The league is open for boys 10 through 12, and those who won't be 13 until after July 1.

Times Changing: Pine Hill Park

Aldermanic Decision to Move Gates, Remove Signs Part of Plan.

By FRED HAMILTON

For some it will be the end of an era.

For others, the beginning of a new one.

But no matter how it's viewed, the Board of Aldermen's decision Monday night to take down the signs and move back the gates to Pine Hill Park is certain to bring about many changes.

Those are just the initial steps in Recreation Superintendent John Cioffredi's plan to turn the area into what Alderman Joseph A. Abel described as a "semi-wild" one.

The first two steps of Cioffredi's plan — removing the signs and moving back the gate — are aimed at keeping people away from the area and avoiding possible suits for damages which might occur in the event of accidents.

The board gave unanimous approval to these steps and put Cioffredi's entire recommendation on file for further study.

Some Rutlanders insist that now as one could possibly want it, perhaps leaning a bit to the pure wild.

A thick dense undergrowth of stunted trees, heavy barbed bush, and rotting limbs creeps toward the road. Travel by a regular passenger car is treacherous at best.

Cioffredi's plan would change all these. If accepted the proposal would turn the area into a natural resource area, with camping sites, horse trails, skimbobles, and lean-tos.

Abel, a member of the city land committee, went up to the area last week.

"Taking down the signs leading to Pine Hill and moving back the gates will be a first step in keeping with what I want," he said.

The question arose of when to take the signs down.

Francis Gallagher, head of the public works commission, suggested that the work might be put off until a later date, because it might interfere with the city's pick-up of trash during clean-up week, which is now in progress.

"I know we're asking the impossible," alderman Howard Douglas quipped, "but let's just see if we can get the signs taken down before next week. I recommend that we give them before Friday of this week to complete the job — let's see what they do."

The job of restoring the park to its original state as a favorite picnic ground will be a big one. Cioffredi has recommended that a master plan be developed. But the taking down of the signs and the moving back of the gate are an initial step in curbing unauthorized people from using the area now.

Rocky Pond, the focal point of the Pine Hill Park area, was formerly a swimming and picnic area. The Chamber of Commerce built tables and a bath house near the area in 1953, but vandals repeatedly destroyed them.

Eventually, the pond area went the way of the rest of Pine Hill Park. The road grew less and less passable, and as it deteriorated, the number of visitors diminished.

Today, only a handful of brave weekend warriors battle the bramble for the chance of eating their hotdogs, beans and potato salad in the great outdoors of Pine Hill Park.

The area does support a relatively large number of local sharpshooters, who find stray beer cans and bottles handy targets for their rifles.

Several attempts were made in the late fifties to clean up Pine Hill, but vandals seemed intent on wrecking it. Finally in 1958, the Chamber of Commerce gave up on the project of keeping Pine Hill a public park.

It has been left since then to the small minority of vandals, beer drinkers, sharpshooters, and amateur lovers, who occasionally park along the rocky road which overlooks the city.

Even the kids got to play firefighters Monday when the Rutland Fire Department burned off a large section of the Meadow Street playground. Fire officials explained that they started the blaze to prevent accidental fires later in the warm season. The exercise gave all the firefighters a chance to sweat off winter's restlessness in the warm spring sun.
